A Cultural History of Food in the Medieval Age Massimo Montanari, 2014-05-22. Europe was formed in the Middle Ages. The merging of the traditions of Roman Mediterranean societies with the customs of Northern Europe created new political, economic, social, and religious structures and practices. Between 500 and 1300 CE, food in all its manifestations, from agriculture to symbol, became ever more complex and integral to Europe's culture and economy. The period saw the growth of culinary literature, the introduction of new spices and cuisines as a result of trade, and war, the impact of the Black Death on food resources, the widening gap between what was eaten by the rich and what by the poor, as well as the influence of religion on food rituals. A Cultural History of Food in the Medieval Age presents an overview of the period with essays on food production, food systems, food security, safety, and crises; food and politics; eating out; professional cooking; kitchens and service work; family and domesticity; body and soul; representations of food; and developments in food production and consumption globally.

A Cultural History of Food in the Age of Empire Martin Bruegel, 2014-05-22. The nineteenth-century West saw extraordinary economic growth and cultural change. This volume explores and explains the birth of the modern world through the food it produced and consumed. Food security vastly improved, though malnutrition and famines persisted. Scientific research radically altered the ways in which food and its relation to the body were conceived; efficiency became the watchword; norms, the measure, and standardized goods, the rule. At the same time, the art of food became a luxury pursuit, as interest in gastronomy soared. A Cultural History of Food in the Age of Empire presents an overview of the period with essays on food production, food systems, food security, safety, and crises; food and politics; eating out; professional cooking; kitchens and service work; family and domesticity; body and soul; representations of food; and developments in food production and consumption globally.

A Cultural History of Race in the Modern and Genomic Age Tanya Maria Golash-Boza, 2023-06-01. The period from the 1920s to the present is marked by the rise of eugenics, the expansion and hardened enforcement of immigration laws legal apartheid the continuance of race pseudoscience and the rise of human and civil rights discourse in response Eugenics programmes in the early 20th century focused on sterilization and evolved into unimaginable horrors with the Nazi regime in Germany Countries in Europe and across the Americas have used immigration policies to shape the racial composition of their territories Legal apartheid has been slowly dismantled in the United States and South Africa yet continues to have enduring consequences Eugenics today persists in various permutations of race science Leaders and activists have drawn from civil and human rights discourses to fight back against the persistence of racial inequalities and racialized discourses in the 21st century We can look back on history and see that the Holocaust was a tragedy of historic proportions yet the tradition of scientific racism that led to the Holocaust continues We can look back and see that the internment of the Japanese during the Second World War was a horrific injustice yet detention camps filled with Central Americans continue to proliferate in the United States and refugee camps around the world are overflowing As this volume makes clear racism is an ideology that is adept at changing with the times yet never dissipates
