Common Themes in Literature

A theme can be stated as one big idea word, but it's more precise when written out as a statement or stated as a complete sentence. One way to target the theme is to find the big idea the author wants to address. This can be identified as a one-word big idea or a complete statement.

Some common theme big ideas are listed below:

Growing Up	Dreams	Jealousy
Courage	Identity	Hope
Family/Friendship	Faith	Loyalty
Perseverance	Equality	Secret
Acceptance	Being Yourself	Death
Compassion	Doing the Right Thing	Freedom
Science	Shame

Think about the piece you are reading and the clues it might have to help you find the theme. For example, if the piece has something about learning, youth, innocence, or responsibility, one big idea may be Growing Up. If the piece has feelings, reasoning, racism, prejudice, or diversity, one big idea may be Acceptance.

Questions to Consider When Targeting a Theme Statement

- What questions does the piece of writing make you have?
- What answers does the piece provide?
- What is the main character trying to deal with or solve?
- What is the main character learning as they deal with the conflict?
- What impression does the piece give you as a whole?
- Do any of the main characters' questions get answered?
- Do the main characters' answers change?
- Do some of the smaller details have greater meaning?
- Do the main characters provide any answer?

To Summarize

Read the piece.
Find the main theme.
Write the theme statement.

Notes on Themes

- Theme is often...

- Theme is often...

- Greediness may cause one...
- Be careful of those full of compliments.
- No one has the right to play at times or he will suffer.
- Greed never pays.
- There's always someone in there yourself.
- You never know the words of others.
- It's easy to despise...
- Always speak the truth.
- It doesn't pay to envy others; you know as little about them.
