The Future Of Education Matthew Gumke, 2019-09-19 The Future Of Education Are You Prepared For Life In 2050 Heraclitus the ancient self taught Greek philosopher and pioneer of wisdom said The only constant in life is change The world is changing at a blistering pace The question is are colleges and universities across the world able to adapt to the rapid changes taking place Steven Hawking said Intelligence is the ability to adapt to change Colleges can't adapt to change it takes years for the changes to become accepted and implemented into the curriculum By the time they're teaching the students the information is already outdated In this book you'll learn about How the old structures of society are crumbling How the collection of data is centralising power How you can collect this data yourself How entrepreneurs are changing the education industry How to take control over your education How to create multiple income streams with your knowledge Information arbitrage How my mentor became a millionaire with his education company How to stay adaptable and powerful in a world that's changing quickly When I was a teenager I was given 2 options by my teachers and family 1 Go to university get a stable job and live a stress free life 2 Don't go to university never have a job worry about how I'll pay the bills live a terrible life and die in absolute poverty In 2019 60% of people aged 25-34 have a degree I'm a firm believer of the quote by David McCullough If everyone is special no one is If everyone gets a trophy trophies become meaningless I grew up in the society of everyone's a winner everyone gets a trophy I even got a trophy for coming 6th place in a race once It made me feel awful When I got home it went where it belonged the trash The problem with college university is it creates a culture of losing Did you know that the richest 100 people have a larger net worth than the world's poorest 4 billion people Do you think the separating factor was that these 100 people got formal education while the poorest 4 billion people didn't If you look into it further you'll see that many of the poorest 4 billion people got a formal education and yet they still can't make ends meet You could say that's across the world in America formal education is still important Let's see if formal education is the deciding factor for having a successful life in America Top 10% average income 322,475 Bottom 90% average income 35,628 As you can see the top 10% is making almost 10x the bottom 90% If 60% of Americans take part in formal education you can see that the vast majority of the 60% of people aren't successful. Yes you can be successful in many aspects of life: love, happiness, family relationships; however, the most important thing to help all the others fall into place is financial success. That's the reason we go to school and on to further education in the first place isn't it: financial success. So we can create a better life for ourselves and our children. The statistics don't lie: colleges are failing us. What's the solution? I believe the solution is self-education. My mentor Jim Rohn taught me: formal education will make you a living; self-education will make you a fortune. This book is for concerned parents worried about the information being taught to their kids, concerned parents worried about their kids accumulating student loan debt, concerned children/teenagers worried about their future. Anyone wanting to become wildly successful by adapting to the future: Are you in the position to adapt to the future? Or are you going to let your teachers, society, and parents force you to take a path that isn't working for the vast majority of college graduates? The average student debt is $38,390. For the fraction of the cost of that you can learn about what's working NOW and will work in the future, not 40 years ago.

#EdJourney Grant Lichtman, 2014-09-09. Your formula for managing innovation and transforming learning. EdJourney: A Roadmap to the Future of Education is a refreshing change from the negativity so common in the world of education today. Over the course of a 3-month solo road trip across the United States, author Grant Lichtman discovered that there is much to be positive about in today's K-12 schools. Lichtman, one of the country's leading experts in educational innovation, interviewed over 600 teachers, administrators, students, parents, and trustees to find out what kind of innovations they're doing right and how others can leverage their successes. Innovation in education takes hard work, planning, and cooperation. With examples from around the country and findings from the latest education research, EdJourney maps out how administrators and teachers can embrace the innovation process that schools and learners need now. Today's 21st-century education presents unique challenges and opportunities to students, and this is a trailblazing practical guide to making sure education is ready for the future. EdJourney focuses on four key questions: What new learning strategies are the top schools implementing to prepare our students for their future rather than for our past? How do teachers and administrators manage transitions to new types of teaching and learning? What are the key obstacles to shifting away from the assembly-line model of education? How can we all leverage the lessons of success from the most innovative schools?
