Locke,2018-01-17 Excerpt from The Fortunate Youth The brood of young Buttons was fed spasmodically and clad at random but their meals were regular and their raiment well assorted compared with Paul s Naturally they came in for clouts and thumps like all the children in Budge Street it was only Paul who underwent organized chastisement The little Buttons often did wrong but in the mother s eyes Paul could never do right In an animal way she was fond of the children Of Button and in a way equally animal she bore a Venomous dislike to the child of Keg worthy Who and what Kegworthy had been neither Paul nor any inhabitant Of Bludston knew Once the boy inquired and she broke a worn frying pan over his head Kegworthy whoever he might have been was wrapt in mystery She had appeared in the town when Paul was a year old giving herself out as a widow That she was by no means destitute was obvious from the fact that she at once rented the house in Budge Street took in lodgers and lived at her ease Button who was one of the lodgers cast upon her the eyes of desire and married her Why she married Button she could never determine Perhaps she had a romantic idea and there is romance even in Budge Street that Button would support her He very soon shattered any such illusion by appropriating the remainder of her fortune and kicking her into the factory with hobnailed boots It would be wrong to say that Mrs Button did not complain she did She rent the air of Budge Street with horrible execration but she went to the factory where save for the intervals of retirement rendered necessary by the births of the little Buttons she was contented enough to stay About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst
