The Tattoo Catherine Grogard, Claudio Lazi, 1994-01-01 Fotografisk billedv rk om tatoveringer The Rhetoric of the Conscience in Donne, Herbert, and Vaughan Ceri Sullivan, 2008-09-11 There is a kind of conscience some men keepe Is like a Member that s benumb d with sleepe Which as it gathers Blood and wakes agen It shoots and pricks and feeles as bigg as ten Donne Herbert and Vaughan see the conscience as only partly theirs only partly under their control Of course as theologians said it ought to be a simple syllogism comparing actions to God s law and giving judgement in a joint procedure of the soul and its maker Inevitably though there are problems Hearts refuse to confess or forget the rules or jumble them up or refuse to come to the point when delivering a verdict The three poets are beady eyed experts on failure After all where subjects can only discover their authentic nature in relation to the divine it matters whether the conversation works Remarkably each poet despite their very different devotional backgrounds uses similar sets of tropes to investigate problems enigma aposiopesis breaking off chiasmus subjectio asking then answering a question and antanaclassis repetition with a difference Structured like a language the conscience is tortured rewritten read and broken up to engineer a proper response Considering the faculty as an uncomfortable extrusion of the divine into the everyday the rhetoric of the conscience transforms Protestant into prosthetic poetics It moves between early modern theology rhetoric and aesthetic theory to give original scholarly and committed readings of the great metaphysical poets Topics covered include boredom torture graffiti tattoos anthologizing resentment tears dust casuistry and opportunism The Tattoo Catherine Grogard, 1994-09-01

The Tattoo Project Deborah Davidson, 2016-12-15 Disrupting commonly held notions about who gets tattooed and why The Tattoo Project describes illustrates and celebrates the social significances of commemorative tattoos Written by scholars from various disciplines as well as by community members and practitioners this edited collection considers the meanings people make from their experiences of love loss trauma resilience and change and why they choose to inscribe those meanings on their bodies This methods based text also examines the process of building a community contributed digital archive of tattoo photos and stories the result of which inspired the contributions to this book Writing at the intersections between the public and the private the authors consider the production and mobilization of knowledge across communities disciplines and space Featuring beautiful tattoo photography personal narratives from project participants and original poetry by Priscilla Uppal The Tattoo Project is a novel read that bridges the gap between academic and popular audiences This timely collection is a valuable resource for courses across the social sciences and humanities and for anyone interested in tattoos and their significance Recycling Virginia Woolf in Contemporary Art and Literature Monica Latham, Caroline Marie, Anne-Laure Rigeade, 2021-08-19 Recycling Virginia Woolf in Contemporary Art and Literature examines Woolf s life and oeuvre from the perspective of recycling and provides answers to essential questions such as Why do artists and writers recycle Woolf s texts and introduce them into new circuits of meaning Why do they perpetuate her iconic figure in literature art and popular culture What does this practice of recycling tell us about the endurance of her oeuvre on the current literary artistic and cultural scene and what does it tell us about our current modes of production and consumption of art and literature This volume offers theoretical definitions of the concept of recycling applied to a multitude of specific case studies The reasons why Woolf's work and authorial figure lend themselves so well to the notion of recycling are manifold first Woolf was a recycler herself and had a personal theory and practice of recycling second her work continues to be a prolific compost that is used in various ways by contemporary writers and artists finally since Woolf has left the original literary sphere to permeate popular culture the limits of what has been recycled have expanded in unexpected ways These essays explore today's trends of fabricating new original artefacts with Woolf's work which thus remains completely relevant to our contemporary needs and beliefs

Tattoo Culture Lee Barron, 2017-05-31 Tattoos are a highly visible social and cultural sight from TV series that represent the lives of tattoo artists and their interactions with clients to world class sports stars and the social actors we meet on a daily basis who display visible tattoo designs Whereas in the not too distant past tattoos were commonly culturally perceived to represent an outward sign of social non conformity or even deviance tattoos now increasingly transcend class gender and age boundaries and arguably are now more culturally acceptable than they have ever been But why is this the case and why do so many social actors elect to wear tattoos Tattoo Culture explores these questions from historical cultural and media perspectives but also from the heart of the culture itself from the dynamics of the tattoo studio the work of the artist and the world of the tattoo convention to the perspective of the social actors who bear designs to investigate the meanings which lie behind the images It critically examines the ways in which tattoos alter social actors sense of being and their relationship with time in the semiotic ways with which they communicate to themselves or to the wider world key elements of their bodily and personal identity and sense of being

Tattoos and Popular Culture Lee Barron, 2020-10-26 The rise of tattoos into the mainstream has been a defining aspect of 21st century western culture Tattoos and Popular Culture showcases how tattoos have been catapulted from deviant and alternative subculture into a popular culture becoming a potent signifier of difference for the millennial generation

The Hydra's Tale R. Rawdon Wilson, 2002-05 Imagine a disgusting experience Now think about your response What was it about the moment that made you turn your head that led your lip to curl and nose to wrinkle Disgust has many triggers some obvious others less so What disgusts us is never irrevocably fixed and certain It changes from culture to culture and even at times within a culture This fluidity makes the term disgust at once deceptively simple and extremely complex In The Hydra's Tale Robert Rawdon Wilson treats the experience of disgust not from the perspective of the disgusting object in the world but from its representation Disgust marks either a slip over the border of the socially sanctioned or a struggle to keep someone or something from crossing that border Working through the spectrum of human response culture and art Wilson teases out the assumptions that underpin the disgust response

Writing on the Body? Thinking Through Gendered Embodiment and Marked Flesh Kay Inckle, 2009-03-26

This groundbreaking piece of work establishes a position of embodiment as an ethically salient epistemological and empirical strategy for understanding representing and experiencing gendered embodiment and marked flesh Developing an embodied feminist critique of the sociology of the body the author integrates this position with some of the most recent developments in qualitative methodologies and creative research practices in order to engage with and represent women's experiences of body marking As such the specific body practices which are addressed body modification and self injury are refigured in the context of a feminist embodied position This position of embodiment not only establishes a holistic non dualistic orientation from which to experience and explore gendered embodiment and body marking practices but in doing so also highlights the limitations of normative dualistic disembodied theories and methods which objectify and distance the very experiences they purport to explain Overall this exploration is a provoking moving and often uncomfortable journey into the imperatives of gendered embodiment abject corporeality blood and pain and the practices which mark the body and evoke and transform the gendered embodied self This is a courageous beautifully written evocative and thought provoking book that takes the reader on an intimate journey into the misunderstood world of body marking practices As part of the journey Inckle provides a range of insights into the fluid ambiguous and complex forms of embodiment experienced by women over time The reflexive stance she adopts throughout enables the reader to chart her emerging awareness of methodological dilemmas and the inherent tensions she experiences in trying to resolve them in relation to feminist ethical positions As part of this process she challenges the norms of knowledge production and dissolves the disciplinary boundaries that frame much of the current debate on embodiment and body marking practices Inckle's findings offer a powerful critique of dominant research perspectives that focus on the body and she makes a strong case for the development of a feminist embodied sociology in the future As such this book will be of immense interest to sociologists and psychologists with an interest in the body and the dynamics of embodiment as well as to scholars seeking to develop their understanding of key methodological issues Professor Andrew C Sparkes PhD Exeter University This book is based on one of the best methodological approaches I have come across Supported by materials from a wide variety of disciplines it is reflexively argued and Dr Inckle charts new grounds in her trajectory from feminist methodologies to creative sociology searching for new ways of producing knowledge and radically broadening the sociological research agenda to include stories that come out of the body I particularly like the way Dr Inckle develops feminist research methodologies critiquing participatory approaches as often difficult to implement and the fearless yet highly problematic positioning of the researching I at the centre of the research process Dr Ronit Lentin Department of Sociology Trinity College Dublin

The Soul That Sins Agbolade O. Olalekan,2020-09-06 No matter how much effort we invest sin and its accompanying evil will remain unexplainable Why Because of the lies and the deceits Inherent in sin is the denial of truth We cover up our unwholesome motives and violent acts against others with a veneer of goodness We sugarcoat our garbage Everyone has a stake in hiding the truth of sin This makes uncovering the mystery of how sin works difficult because wherever and whenever we dig lies rush in to fill the hole Lying frustrates the process of reasonable conversation and thinking More than this sinful activity is at bottom both self destructive and world destructive We are born into the state of sin even though we do not commit actual sins until after we arrive But these moderns redefinition do not really erase our problem Now the question arises again If I am born into a sinful state how can I personally be responsible for that state Why am I in need of salvation

BODY PIERCING AND TATTOOING (EasyRead Super Large 24pt Edition), Tattooed Bodies Nikki Sullivan, 2001-09-30 Drawing on the works of a number of postmodern theorists this study suggests that the tattooed body is symptomatic of a general process of marking and being marked and is a social production of identity and difference Shifting the focus away from what the tattooed body means to what it does this work analyzes how it functions and what effects it produces It challenges the ways in which identity and difference are discursively produced particularly in psychological criminological and counter cultural discourses The writings of such theorists as Foucault Levinas Barthes and Lingis are scrutinized to reveal how their discourse interprets the tattooed body as simply an aberrant threat to the body or simply a positive counter cultural challenge These theories are supplanted with this unique approach to notions of subjectivity textuality ethics and pleasure and to the relationships among them This examination of the role of the body in social political and ethical relations will attract scholars from a number of disciplines including cultural studies gender studies philosophy visual arts sociology and English It will also appeal to critics and practitioners in contemporary practices of body modification
