the heart of anthropology it raises the controversial question of why and for whom the anthropological discipline functions

Warwick, Fernando Reimers, 1995-11-06 Hope or Despair asks what promotes and what holds back student learning in Pakistan's government sponsored primary schools Using a national sample of schools students teachers and supervisors it shows how learning is affected by student background teachers and teaching school supervision facilities and innovation It is the first book to use achievement tests based on the national curriculum to show influences on learning in the primary schools of an entire developing country The study also explores why some students complete primary school and others do not The overall quality of education in Pakistan's government primary schools is low but student learning rises with the teacher's formal education and with certain teaching practices Student social class a strong influence on learning in the United States makes little difference in Pakistan Whether the teacher is male or female has no relationship to learning in science but it does affect achievement in mathematics Neither supervision nor school facilities are related to achievement This unique study will be of great interest to those concerned with schooling effectiveness in developing countries as well as to economists sociologists and political scientists interested in human resources in those countries

Liberal Peacebuilding and the Locus of Legitimacy David Roberts, 2016-02-05 Liberal peacebuilding too often builds neither peace nor Liberalism In a growing number of cases people aren't rejecting and relegating democracy because it's bad they're challenging it because it isn't relevant to their priorities and needs The peacebuilding moment when consent for intervention is present and the opportunity to build a sustainable social contract between peacebuilders and people is most fruitful is being squandered This relationship between governed and governance relies on mutual needs realization but there is no formal or informal requirement and mechanism for ascertaining what the subjects of peacebuilding might prioritize Instead peacebuilders give the subjects of peacebuilding what they think they should have This legitimacy gap between what peacebuilders give and what subjects want is the subject of this book Through a range of empirical case studies conducted by country specialists the book reveals that when asked people often prioritize roads electricity jobs housing schooling and pertinent justice amongst other things in the immediate aftermath of war We find that mapping this locus of legitimacy may help develop the kind of relationship upon which the sustainability of any social contract between governed and governance rests This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Intervention and Statebuilding Doing Research in Organizations (RLE: Organizations) Alan Bryman,2013-05-02 This textbook provides first hand inside accounts of the process of doing research in organizations It is intended both for students of research methods in sociology and social psychology and for students of organization studies organizational behaviour and management The contributors tackle such problems as gaining access to organizations getting on in organizations quantitative and qualitative styles of investigation the use of historical materials the effects of resources on the context of research the part played by political factors in organizational research the relevance of grounded theory and conducting research within a cross cultural framework
