Telling Tales The Pedagogy And Promise Of African American Literature For Youth:

Telling Tales Dianne A. Johnson, Dianne Johnson-Feelings, 1990-10-05 This work examines the development of African American literature for young people in terms of recurrent thematic content and underlying philosophies from 1920 to the present Johnson provides a close reading of various texts including 1 The Brownies Book magazine edited by W E B Du Bois and Jessie Fauset from January 1920 through December 1921 2 fiction non fiction and poetry written by Langston Hughes and Arna Bontemps in the 1930s and 1940s and the historical fiction that their work prefigures 3 the picture book canon of Lucille Clifton poet laureate of Maryland and Pulitzer nominee and one of the most prolific writers of verse and prose for children The book also features illustrations representing books published between 1920 and the present Included among these is a cover from The Brownies Book magazine a wood cut from Hughes and Bontemps 1932 Popsy and Fifi and a painting from Harriet and the Promised Land written and illustrated by celebrated artist Jacob Lawrence and an illustration by John Steptoe Telling Tales takes a fresh new look at material that has long been neglected Until recently most critics have examined not African American children's literature itself but misrepresentations and stereotypes of black people in mainstream literature This current study is an attempt to redirect critical inquiry in the field The book creates a space for further critical study that will more fully explore issues herein the relationship between the publishing industry and the development of African American children's literature the nature of the relationship between African American adult and children's literature the relationship between word and image and more Most importantly the book provides a useful introduction and model for reading this literature for a broad audience that includes parents teachers librarians other educators and scholars of African American letters

Multicultural and Ethnic Children's Literature in the United States Donna L. Gilton, 2007 This book describes the history and characteristics of ethnic and multicultural children's literature in the U S as well as related materials published elsewhere It relates in great detail the people businesses organizations and institutions that create disseminate promote critique and collect these materials Author Donna Gilton gives a detailed history of U S multicultural and ethnic children's literature throughout several historic periods relating these developments to general social and political U S history Chapters illustrate characteristics of U S multicultural children's books the major issues in the field and multicultural initiatives and mainstream responses while also providing outlines of research possibilities in the field and suggesting other groups of people who should be emphasized more in the future In doing all this Multicultural and Ethnic Children's Literature in the United States brings together valuable and scattered information for the busy and involved librarians teachers parents publishers distributors and community leaders who wish to use and promote this material with children

Fairy Tales with a Black Consciousness Vivian Yenika-Agbaw, Ruth McKoy Lowery, Laretta Henderson, 2013-07-05 The all new essays in this book discuss black cultural retellings of traditional European fairy tales The representation of black protagonists in such tales helps to shape children's ideas about themselves and the world beyond which can ignite a will to read books representing diverse characters The need for a multicultural text set which includes the multiplicity of cultures within the black diaspora is discussed The tales referenced in the text are rich in perspective they are Aesop s fables Cinderella Rapunzel and Ananse Readers will see that stories from black perspectives adhere to the dictates of traditional literary conventions while still steeped in literary traditions traceable to Africa or the diaspora

Speech and Silence in Contemporary Children's Literature Danielle E. Price, 2023-10-31 Speech and Silence in Contemporary Children s Literature brings a fresh perspective to a central literary question Who speaks by examining a variety of represented silences These include children who do not speak do not yet speak effectively or speak on behalf of others A rich and unexamined literary archive explores the problematics of children who are literally silent or metaphorically so because they cannot communicate effectively with adults or peers This project centers children s literature in the question of voice by considering disability gender race and ecocriticism Children s literature rests on a paradox at the root of its own genre it is produced by an adult author writing to a constructed idea of what children should be By reading a range of contemporary children s literature this book scrutinizes how such texts narrate the child s journey from communicative alterity to a place of empowered adult speech Sometimes the child s verbal enclosure enables privacy and resistance At other times silence is coerced or imposed or arises from bodily impairment Children may act as intermediaries speaking on behalf of species that cannot Recently we have seen children exercise their voices on the world stage and as authors In all cases the texts analyzed here reveal speech as a minefield to be traversed Children who talk too much too little or with insufficient expertise pose problems to themselves and others Implicitly and sometimes explicitly they attempt to hold adults to account inside and outside the text Speech and Silence in Contemporary Children s Literature addresses this underconceptualized subject in what will be an important text for scholars of children s literature childhood studies English disability studies gender studies race studies ecopedagogy and education

Africana Anthony Appiah, Henry Louis Gates (Jr.), 2005 Ninety years after W E B Du Bois first articulated the need for the equivalent of a black Encyclopedia Britannica Kwame Anthony Appiah and Henry Louis Gates Jr realized his vision by publishing Africana The Encyclopedia of the African and African American Experience in 1999 This new greatly expanded edition of the original work broadens the foundation provided by Africana Including more than one million new words Africana has been completely updated and revised New entries on African kingdoms have been added bibliographies now accompany most articles and the encyclopedia s coverage of the African diaspora in Latin America and the Caribbean has been expanded transforming the set into the most authoritative research and scholarly reference set on the African experience ever created More than 4 000 articles cover prominent individuals events trends places political movements art forms business and trade religion ethnic groups organizations and countries on both sides of the Atlantic African American history and culture in the present day United States receive a strong emphasis but African American history and culture throughout the rest of the Americas and their origins in African itself have an equally strong presence

The Rise of American Girls' Literature Ashley N. Reese, 2021-06-17 This Element looks at the publishing history of the genre girls literature in the United States spanning 1850-1940. The genre is set in context beginning with an examination of the early American women's literature that preceded girls literature. Then the Element explores several sub-genres of girls literature: the family story, orphan story, school story, as well as African American girls literature. Underpinning each of these stories is the bildungsroman, which overwhelmingly ends with girls growing down to marry and raise children following the ideals outlined in the cult of domesticity.

Just Us Girls Wendy Rountree, 2008 Just Us Girls: The Contemporary African American Young Adult Novel is a welcome addition to the literary criticism in a field that deserves more critical study. African American children's and young adult literature. This book is a close reading textual study of major issues and themes in contemporary, i.e., post-Civil Rights era young adult novels written by both well-known and lesser-known African American women writers, written primarily from an African American perspective and primarily but not exclusively for an African American female audience. Representative works by Candy Dawson Boyd, Rita Williams Garcia, Deborah Gregory Rosa, Guy Virginia Hamilton, Mildred Pitts Walter, and Jacqueline Woodson are analyzed. Each chapter investigates cultural, social, and/or psychological issues examined by the writers that are prevalent in the actual lives of African American girls.

Children's Literature and Culture of the First World War Lissa Paul, Rosemary R. Johnston, Emma Short, 2015-12-22 Because all wars in the twenty-first century are potentially global wars, the centenary of the first global war is the occasion for reflection. This volume offers an unprecedented account of the lives, stories, letters, games, schools, institutions such as the Boy Scouts and YMCA, and toys of children in Europe, North America, and the Global South during the First World War and surrounding years. By engaging with developments in Children's Literature, War Studies, and Education and mining newly available archival resources including letters written by children, the contributors to this volume demonstrate how perceptions of childhood changed in the period. Children who had been constructed as Romantic innocents playing safely in secure gardens were transformed into socially responsible children actively committing themselves to the war effort. In order to foreground cross-cultural connections across what had been perceived as enemy lines, perspectives on German, American, British, Australian, and Canadian children's literature and culture are situated so that they work in conversation with each other. The multidisciplinary, multinational range of contributors to this volume make it distinctive and a particularly valuable contribution to emerging studies on the impact of war on the lives of children.
