Terracotta Designs Of Alfred Waterhouse:

The Terracotta Designs of Alfred Waterhouse Colin Cunningham, 2001 The Natural History Museum in London is one of Britain's finest examples of late Victorian architecture at its exuberant height. A decorative tour de force it was conceived by Alfred Waterhouse whose attention to detail in the creation of this masterpiece is legendary. The terracotta mouldings of flora and fauna adorning both interior and exterior of the building rival in richness and variety the equally renowned contents of the Museum's collections. This book presents a history of the development of Waterhouse's designs for these mouldings setting them in the context of his work as a whole and of their manufacture. It acknowledges his courage in selecting the generally frowned upon medium of terracotta for the execution of the ornament rather than the established and respected material of carved stone. It also provides a unique document of his exquisite pencil drawings for the individual blocks although many of the drawings were destroyed when their practical use had expired over 130 still survive and are held in the Museum's Library. Seldom seen and never reproduced in their entirety they bear witness to the fact that Waterhouse was not only a skilled architect but also an extremely accomplished draughtsman. This is a unique portrait of an ornamental scheme which influenced a generation at the end of the nineteenth century. Sustainable Building Design Vidar Lerum, 2015-09-07

A twenty first century renaissance is emerging in architecture. After a century of building designs characterized by high energy demand, low quality lighting and poor thermal comfort, the fundamental questions must be asked again: is there a better path to designing the most energy efficient, comfortable, functional and beautiful buildings for a sustainable future? While seeking solutions for the future, there are lessons to be learned from the best buildings of the past. Sustainable Building Design explores outstanding buildings and building designs of the twenty first century with an emphasis on the artistry of masters of architecture who came before. By dissecting and analyzing great public buildings of the nineteenth and twenty first centuries, materials, techniques and methods are discovered. This book presents the reader with clues and suggestions that will reveal the secrets of these buildings and by doing so provides the reader with a thorough understanding of how these architectural masterpieces work. Using photographs, drawings, sections, plans and diagrams which are painstakingly redrawn for consistency and clarity based on a wide range of documentation, Vidar Lerum compares works of architecture from the nineteenth and twenty first centuries. The reader is presented with a careful analysis of each building providing a compelling sourcebook of ideas for students and professional architects alike. Redisplaying Museum Collections

Hannah Paddon, 2016-04-08 This is the first book to examine in depth the multi million pound redisplay and reinterpretation process in British museums in the early twenty first century. Acknowledging the importance of the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) as project catalyst, Hannah Paddon explains and explores the complex process from the initial stages of project conceptualisation to the final stages of museum re-opening and exhibition evaluation. She also provides an in depth look using three case study museums at the factors which shape each museum redisplay project including topics such as museum architecture government agendas and the exhibition team Finally the book offers discussions and conclusions around pitfalls and successes and thoughts about the future of collection redisplay

Continental Crosscurrents J. B. Bullen, 2005-08-25 Continental Crosscurrents is a series of case studies reflecting British attitudes to continental art during the nineteenth and the early twentieth centuries It stresses the way in which the British went to the continent in their search for origins or their pursuit of sources of purity and originality This cult of the primitive took many forms it involved a reassessment of medieval German and Italian art and offered new ways of interpreting Venetian painting it opened up new readings of architectural history and the discovery of the Romanesque it generated a debate about the value of returning to religious subjects in art and it raised the question of the relationship between modern art and Byzantine art in the early twentieth century J B Bullen's original study presents some exciting findings Few critics have noticed how much in advance of his time was Coleridge's passion for medieval art Ruskin's debt in the Stones of Venice to Victor Hugo's Notre Dame de Paris has hardly been noted and Browning's involvement with the debate on the morality of Christian art is explored more extensively than previously Three chapters are devoted to the role of British criticism in identifying the Romanesque style in architecture and differentiating it from the Gothic They trace the concept as it arose in criticism at the beginning of the nineteenth century its employment in the remarkable buildings of Edmund Sharpe and Sara Losh and the way in which it reached a climax in Waterhouse's enigmatic choice of Romanesque for the Natural History Museum in London The collection concludes with two continental episodes from the history of modernism One is the explosive British reaction to the primitivism of Gauguin the other involves the identifying of one of the characters in D H Lawrence's novel Women in Love Curious evidence suggests that the malevolent figure of Loerke was based on a German sculptor whom Lawrence met in Italy before the First World War
