Creating the New Man Yinghong Cheng, 2008-12-31 The idea of eliminating undesirable traits from human temperament to create a new man has been part of moral and political thinking worldwide for millennia During the Enlightenment European philosophers sought to construct an ideological framework for reshaping human nature But it was only among the communist regimes of the twentieth century that such ideas were actually put into practice on a nationwide scale In this book Yinghong Cheng examines three culturally diverse sociopolitical experiments the Soviet Union under Lenin and Stalin China under Mao and Cuba under Castro in an attempt to better understand the origins and development of the new man The book's fundamental concerns are how these communist revolutions strove to create a new morally and psychologically superior human being and how this task paralleled efforts to create a superior society To these ends it addresses a number of questions What are the intellectual roots of the new man concept How was this idealistic and utopian goal linked to specific political and economic programs How do the policies of these particular regimes based as they are on universal communist ideology reflect national and cultural traditions Cheng begins by exploring the origins of the idea of human perfectibility during the Enlightenment

His discussion moves to other European intellectual movements and then to the creation of the Soviet Man the first communist new man in world history Subsequent chapters examine China s experiment with human nature starting with the nationalistic debate about a new national character at the turn of the twentieth century and Cuban perceptions of the new man and his role in propelling the revolution from a nationalist to a socialist and finally a communist movement The last chapter considers the global influence of the Soviet Chinese and Cuban experiments Creating the New Man contributes greatly to our understanding of how three very different countries and their leaders carried out problematic and controversial visions and programs It will be of special interest to students and scholars of world history and intellectual social and revolutionary history and also development studies and philosophy
