During the century 1795-1895 the Royal Navy carried out a series of surveys of the south western coast of Africa. This book publishes for the first time verbatim extracts from the Remark books of the ships involved. These firsthand accounts offer illuminations, perspectives on the advent of colonialism in Namibia. Historical notes, comments on the toponymy of the Namib coast, lists of relevant charts and information on the ships put this crucial century of naval activity into context. The book brings to life a period that combined serious scientific work with adventure at sea, gunrunning, feudal hegemonies, suicidal politics, diplomatic wrangling, danger and betrayal from the back cover Went to the Devil Anthony J. Connors, 2019-08-30
Edward Davoll was a respected New Bedford whaling captain in an industry at its peak in the 1850s. But mid-career disillusioned with whaling, desperately lonely at sea and experiencing financial problems, he turned to the slave trade with disastrous results. Why would a man of good reputation in a city known for its racial tolerance and Quaker inspired abolitionism risk engagement with this morally repugnant industry? In this riveting biography, Anthony J. Connors explores this question by detailing not only the troubled adventurous life of this man but also the turbulent times in which he lived. Set in an era of social and political fragmentation and impending civil war when changes in maritime law and the economics of whaling emboldened slaving agents to target captains and their vessels for the illicit trade, Davoll's story reveals the deadly combination of greed and racial antipathy that encouraged otherwise principled Americans to participate in the African slave trade.
