Devoldere, 2015 Everything is water claimed Thales of Miletus around 600 BC Some assert that this statement was the beginning of philosophy Water is life All life comes from the water The land is what is left behind by the sea The Low Countries and the Netherlands in particular know all about that They have been won from the sea But that victory is never definitive 0 In this book we take a closer look at water in all its forms and at that specific sea of ours You can travel the length of the Belgian coast by tram from De Panne to Knokke You can sail from Vlissingen to Texel We wonder whether the ports of Rotterdam and Antwerp could coordinate their activities but perhaps as far as China is concerned Zeebruges Ghent Terneuzen and Vlissingen are just hubs of one and the same megaport offering access to Europe There is a portfolio of pictures too showing what people do on the wide sandy beaches of the Low Countries in their summer hours of idleness The great pirates of the past are also honoured Today Somali pirates raise the problem of the lawlessness of the sea Today we still need an international law of the sea especially where pollution and overfishing are concerned With regard to the latter however what food can we still obtain from our North Sea And finally there is no sea without seascapes and poems of course a flood of words to conjure up the roar of the surf the eternal lapping of the waves 0 And the tides They keep on turning The Low Countries, 2001 The Low Countries is a yearbook aimed at presenting to the world the culture and society of the Dutch speaking area which embraces both the Netherlands and also Flanders the northern part of Belgium The articles in this yearbook survey the living contemporary culture of the Low Countries as well as their cultural heritage It provides information about literature and the arts but also about broad social and historical development in Flanders and the Netherlands TLC Luc Devoldere, 2005 The Low Countries 2002, 2002 The Low Countries is a yearbook aimed at presenting to the world the culture and society of the Dutch speaking area which embraces both the Netherlands and also Flanders the northern part of Belgium The articles in this yearbook survey the living contemporary culture of the Low Countries as well as their cultural heritage It provides information about literature and the arts but also about broad social and historical development in Flanders and the Netherlands
