Feldman, Albert N. Link, Donald S. Siegel, 2012-12-06 Science and technology have long been regarded as important determinants of economic growth Edwin Mansfield 1971 pp 1 2 a pioneer in the economics of technological change noted Technological change is an important if not the most important factor responsible for economic growth without question it is one of the most important determinants of the shape and evolution of the American economy Science and technology are even more important in the new economy with its greater emphasis on the role of intellectual property and knowledge transfer Therefore it is unfortunate that most individuals rarely have the opportunity to explore the economic implications of science and technology As a result the antecedents and consequences of technological change are poorly understood by many in the general public This lack of understanding is reflected in a recent survey conducted by the National Science Board 2000 summarized in Science Engineering Indicators As shown in Table 1 1 the findings of the survey indicated that many Americans despite a high level of interests in such matters are not as well informed about technological issues as they are about other policy issues As shown in the table individuals self assess based on a scale from 1 to 100 their interest in science and technology policy issues as being relatively high yet they self assess their knowledge or informedness about these issues relatively lower Emergence and Survival of New Businesses
