The third edition of Teaching and Researching Motivation offers newly updated and extended coverage of motivation research and pedagogical practice. As in the 2001 and 2011 editions, the text provides comprehensive insights into motivation research and teaching. However, the current edition, as in the authors' words, is "not so much a revised version as a newly written book that has the same authors, the same title and the same structure as the previous one" (Dörnyei and Ushioda, 2021, p. x). It reflects the dramatic changes in the field of motivation research and examines how theoretical insights can be used in everyday teaching practice.

The monograph comprises four parts. Part I, "What is Motivation?", consists of four chapters. The first chapter pertains to the complex meaning of the term "motivation" and summarizes the key challenges of theorizing motivation. Appealing to us in this chapter is that the authors put a stronger emphasis on understanding motivation in relation to learning LÖTEs (languages other than English) and in relation to individual multilingualism. It is altogether fitting and proper for them to hold this belief since the world is becoming more diversified in terms of multilingualism. Chapter 2 offers a historical overview of the most influential cognitive motivation theories. In the new edition, social cultural factors impacting students' motivation are elaborated in more detail. Chapter 3 presents a historical overview of theories of L2 motivation. Drawing on insights from L2 research and psychology, Dörnyei and Ushioda articulate nine interrelated conditions for the motivating capacity of future L2 self-image. With a focus on the L2 Motivation Self System theory, Chapter 4 also critically examines other new theoretical approaches emerged in the field of L2 motivation over the past decade. Finally, it highlights two new perspectives: a focus on L2 learner engagement and "small lens" approaches.

Part II, "Motivation and Language Teaching," includes three chapters on issues related to the relation between motivation and language teaching. Chapter 5 explores the extent to which theoretical and research insights can lead to practical recommendations for motivating the students in and outside of the language classroom. Based on this principle, it presents instructive approaches to motivating language learners. It also eloquently holds that motivational self-regulation and learner autonomy are two potent energizers which will have a lasting impact beyond the classroom. Chapter 6, "Motivation in Context," deals with the "dark side" of motivation, "demotivation." It argues that focused interventions can have significant positive outcomes and help counteract demotivation and facilitate remotivation within second language acquisition (SLA). The last chapter in this part is of special interest as it explores the relationship between language teacher and learner motivation, highlighting possible self-theory (exploring conceptual change in language teachers). As a Chinese idiom goes, teaching benefits teachers and students alike. The same is true of language teacher motivation. It argues that teachers' passion and enthusiasm facilitate their teaching and enhance students' learning; and vice versa.

Important and of significance is how to do research so that it can facilitate teaching. Part III, "Researching Motivation," includes two chapters on issues related to primary, data-based motivation research. Chapter 8 covers the unique characteristics, challenges and research

Teaching And Researching Motivation:

Teaching and Researching: Motivation Zoltán Dörnyei, Ema Ushioda, 2013-11-26 Cultivating motivation is crucial to a language learner's success and therefore crucial for the language teacher and researcher to understand. This fully revised edition of a groundbreaking work reflects the dramatic changes the field of motivation research has undergone in recent years including the impact of language globalisation and various dynamic and relational research methodologies and offers ways in which this research can be put to practical use in the classroom and in research. Key new features and material: A brand new chapter on current socio-dynamic and complex systems perspectives. New approaches to motivating students based on the L2 Motivational Self System. Illustrative summaries of qualitative and mixed methods studies. Samples of new self-related motivation measures. Providing a clear and comprehensive theory-driven account of motivation. Teaching and Researching Motivation examines how theoretical insights can be used in everyday teaching practice and offers practical tips. The final section provides a range of useful resources including relevant websites, key reference works and tried and tested example questionnaires. Written in an accessible style and illustrated with concrete examples, it is an invaluable resource for teachers and researchers alike.

Zhongshe Lu, Meihua Liu, Wenxia Zhang, 2021-06-21 China has attached great importance to teaching students to become proficient users of English. Yet despite a plethora of studies and practice on Chinese ESL/EFL English as a second foreign language learners, the large student population, its complicated composition, and the complex nature of second and foreign language learning have rendered it difficult to offer a panoramic view on ESL/EFL teaching and learning of Chinese learners. This book provides a new and up-to-date perspective on the teaching and learning of Chinese ESL/EFL learners. The book collects 15 case studies falling into two parts: Curriculum Development and Teaching Practice and Skills Based Research. The collected studies deploy qualitative, quantitative, or mixed methods to explore patterns, features, developments, and causes and effects of a variety of issues in the sphere of ESL/EFL teaching and learning. Moreover, the cases offer insights that are relevant beyond the mainland Chinese context, such as Hong Kong, Macau, Britain, and Australia. Students and scholars of TESOL and applied linguistics will be interested in this title.

Contemporary English Language Teaching and

Research Mariusz Marczak, 2015-10-05 As the English language has spread around the globe and the English teaching industry has expanded, so interest in the theory behind the methods of teaching and curiosity regarding innovative classroom techniques have also grown. Recently, advances in technology have had a major impact on the way teachers at all levels work, as has the greater interest in the learner as an individual. This book provides detailed insight into both of these forces. Contemporary English Language Teaching and Research will appeal both to researchers in the field, since it contains a number of new and exciting studies, as well as reflections on the research process itself, and to language teachers, both those practising and those in training who wish to keep abreast of the latest developments in teaching techniques and understanding of learners. The book provides a snapshot of today's research environment in the field of teaching and learning English as a foreign language. It brings together work from established academics and young researchers with a wide variety of classroom teaching experience and an equally wide range of perspectives and priorities.

Researching Second Language Learning and Teaching from a Psycholinguistic Perspective Dagmara Gałajda, Paweł Zakrajewski, Mirosław Pawlak, 2016-04-20 This edited collection explores the processes of second language learning and teaching from a psycholinguistic perspective. Authored by leading experts in the field, the book includes studies focusing on theoretical, empirical, and practical aspects of second and foreign language education. Part One offers contributions devoted to a range of learner-related factors, dealing with affective and cognitive variables, the process of reading, and the acquisition of lexis. Part Two brings together papers related to teacher awareness of second language instruction that focus on conversational styles, fostering intercultural pragmatics, teacher job satisfaction, the development of instructional materials, and challenges of teacher training in different contexts. It is of interest to researchers as well as graduate and postgraduate students seeking fresh inspirations for their own empirical investigations of the ways in which second and foreign languages are taught and learned.
