Research in the World Language Classroom Mary Lynn Redmond, 2013-06-01 The current thrust in the field of education is to improve teachers understanding of how research on best practices can improve student learning The field of world language education introduces a double perhaps a triple bind teachers must be able to design and deliver instruction that aligns with national expectations for developing students language and intercultural abilities for success in the global workplace yet in schools across America all K 12 students do not have the opportunity to study languages even though research supports their astonishing facility for acquisition Schools and teachers without resources including time to investigate and implement evidence based best practices are ultimately held accountable for student performance If world language teachers are to advocate for languages they must use their expertise and share evidence of their students progress The American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages ACTFL recently began development of a national research priorities agenda for grades preK 16 Action research which is classroom centered and inquiry based can contribute to our profession's efforts as it helps us to increase awareness of the critical need for language study in grades preK-16. World language teachers can become teacher researchers in their own classrooms, gathering deeply meaningful insights into their students' progress that they can share with others. Teacher researchers investigate innovative approaches in response to their questions about teaching and learning which are rooted in daily experience. They engage their students in fresh learning activities, and student feedback helps them to make better decisions about instructional and assessment strategies. Results can be shared with stakeholders including parents, administrators, school board members, and guidance counselors as evidence of what all kinds of students can do in languages. At a time in our history when we are striving to prepare teachers for 21st-century schools that prioritize global competence, Action Research in the World Language Classroom is a timely resource for the profession. It describes a natural, engaging, motivating way to contribute, particularly for preservice teachers who are shaping their views and understanding about world language instruction and the connections between research and best practices. The book includes four studies conducted by preservice teachers during their student teaching internships in North Carolina public schools. The editor hopes that their work and observations will inspire and assist world language educators at all stages of their careers. Reading to Learn in a Foreign Language Keiko Koda, Junko Yamashita, 2018-09-03

It presents a solid conceptual framework that integrates theories in multiple research domains, including second language acquisition, knowledge acquisition, and language assessment. Literacy Across Languages and Cultures Bernardo M. Ferdman, Rose-Marie Weber, Arnulfo G. Ramirez, 1994-01-01 This book examines the linkage between literacy and linguistic diversity embedding them in their social and cultural contexts It illustrates that a more complete understanding of literacy among diverse populations and in multicultural societies requires attention to issues of literacy per se as well as to improving an educational process that has relevance beyond members of majority cultures and linguistic groups The focus of the book is on the social and cultural contexts in which literacy develops and is enacted with an emphasis on the North American situation Educators and researchers are discovering that cognitive approaches while very valuable are insufficient by themselves to answer important questions about literacy in heterogeneous societies By considering the implications of family school culture society and nation for literary processes the book answers the following questions In a multi ethnic context what does it mean to be literate What are the processes involved in becoming and being literate in a second language In what ways is literacy in a second language similar and in what ways is it different from mother tongue literacy What factors must be understood to better describe and facilitate literacy acquisition among members of ethnic and linguistic minorities What are some current approaches that are being used to accomplish this These are vital questions for researchers and educators in a world that has a large number of immigrants a variety of multi ethnic and multi lingual societies and an increasing degree of multinational activity Beyond addressing applied concerns attending to these questions can provide new insights into basic aspects of literacy
