It approaches instructional models, strategies, methods, techniques, tactics, and planning from a new perspective and shares effective tips to help readers better understand the instructional process and its theoretical elements. The book addresses the following questions: What is the nature of the instructional process? What are the classifications of contemporary models and strategies developed within the instructional process? Which groups yield the most effective methods and techniques, and how can they best be practically implemented? What are the instructional tactics teachers need to take into consideration in which groups are they collected, and which tips can help us employ each tactic? Additionally, readers can adapt the book's ready-to-use sample activities to their own educational settings. Whitehill, 2012-01-05 Developed in the context of health sciences education in the late 1960s, problem-based learning (PBL) is now widely deployed as an education methodology. Its problem-solving, collaborative, student-centered ethos is seen as a more appropriate system of pedagogy than earlier chalk and talk modes Focusing on its use in clinical education this collection of recent scholarship on PBL examines the ways in which PBL is both conceived and implemented in clinical education The work has a dual emphasis research driven on the one hand while on the other assessing new methodologies to explore how problem based curricula support the achievement of students learning outcomes in the context of clinical education The chapters draw on studies that explore PBL both theoretically and empirically The volume s eclecticism capitalises on the growing body of empirical research into PBL evaluations It balances this with studies analysing the relatively new area of discourse based research on PBL in action whose focus has been to interrogate the how of student learning in curricula with PBL content This publication will be of interest to clinical teachers curriculum designers and those interested in innovations in the scholarship of teaching and learning in PBL curricula
