Canines have been used in human warfare for ages. Ancient Greeks and Egyptians used dogs in battle. Dogs were part of Rome's army's supply in the first century. In the Middle Ages, knights traveled dogs with canine armor.

During World War I, Germany, France and Great Britain employed canines. They were used to carry messages, haul supplies, stand as sentries, and more.

The United States didn't begin officially training its canine comrades until War II. Before that, dogs like Stubby served as informal members of the American military.
