

community. 'No archaeologists could agree to relinquish or share "control of the past" by deciding to abandon or modify their understandings or interpretations of the past in favour of, say, an indigenous people's account of that past' (p. 133), Cooper argues. That view would not be shared by all archaeologists, and indeed some of the contributors to the current volume would likely disagree.

In an intriguing discussion of the concept of world heritage, Atle Omland addresses the key question of how inclusive heritage should and can be. While the underlying concept of world heritage presumes a common, shared past, that presumption is challenged by a variety of communities and interests which have a more immediate concern for, or interest in, one or another heritage site. Omland acknowledges the ethical problems attendant on an inclusive past, but favours the concept, particularly in a somewhat ambiguous, and hence flexible, form.

The Ethics of Archaeology covers a wide range of intellectual territory, ranging from philosophy to legal frameworks, from indigenous viewpoints to the practical application of ethical standards, and from the role of trust in virtue ethics to the role of institutional review boards (IRBs) in regulating human subject research. It admirably accomplishes its stated goal to 'promote dialogue between archaeologists, anthropologists and philosophers on significant ethical issues raised by the contemporary practice of archaeology' (p. 1), although admittedly the protagonists may sometimes be talking past rather than actively engaging with one another.

Although there are certainly exceptions, two related themes generally link these volumes. First and perhaps foremost is the (often implicit) recognition that archaeologists don't actually study the past. Instead we study the present for clues to the past, so that our studies always take place within one or more contemporary contexts. As a consequence, studies of an otherwise dead past can impact on myriad living communities, even if these do not claim descent from the past communities being studied.

Second, ethical obligations have often been understood as moral imperatives separate from the question 'obligation to whom?' A series of studies in these volumes foreground the problem of to whom obligations are owed, using this question to recast the criteria for determining ethical practice. Whilst most of the contributors would acknowledge that multiple communities or groups can advance valid claims to the past, they differ regarding how these claims should be prioritized or privileged.

Perhaps as a consequence of these two themes, that past sometimes recedes, seeming to become little more (and here I am admittedly betraying my own views) than political and moral capital for various living communities – indigenous, popular or academic – with little character or consequence uniquely its own. The past becomes a means to the present, rather than a fundamentally different place with the capacity to surprise or to instruct.

These are, however, generalizations perilous to draw from volumes representing so many diverse and thoughtful essays. They provide an excellent introduction to the range of topics and viewpoints in archaeological ethics, but constitute no guide for the perplexed. Ethical views in archaeology, archaeological practice, and cultural heritage admit to no simple consensus, and some of the viewpoints eloquently argued reflect fundamentally different epistemological and ethical constructions of both the past and the proper role and purpose of its study. Reflecting as this does significant divisions within the discipline, this multiplicity of voices and viewpoints is to the credit of the editors of each volume.
