Sounding New Media Frances Dyson, 2009-09-04 Sounding New Media examines the long neglected role of sound and audio in the development of new media theory and practice including new technologies and performance art events with particular emphasis on sound embodiment art and technological interactions Frances Dyson takes an historical approach focusing on technologies that became available in the mid twentieth century electronics imaging and digital and computer processing and analyzing the work of such artists as John Cage Edgard Var se Antonin Artaud and Char Davies She utilizes sound s intangibility to study ideas about embodiment or its lack in art and technology as well as fears about technology and the so called post human Dyson argues that the concept of immersion has become a path leading away from aesthetic questions about meaning and toward questions about embodiment and the physical The result is an insightful journey through the new technologies derived from electronics imaging and digital and computer processing toward the creation of an aesthetic and philosophical framework for considering the least material element of an artwork sound

The Age of Electroacoustics Roland Wittje, 2016-11-11

The transformation of acoustics into electro acoustics a field at the intersection of science and technology guided by electrical engineering industry and the military At the end of the nineteenth century acoustics was a science of musical sounds the musically trained ear was the ultimate reference Just a few decades into the twentieth century acoustics had undergone a transformation from a scientific field based on the understanding of classical music to one guided by electrical engineering with industrial and military applications In this book Roland Wittje traces this transition from the late nineteenth century work of Hermann Helmholtz to the militarized research of World War I and media technology in the 1930s Wittje shows that physics in the early twentieth century was not only about relativity and atomic structure but encompassed a range of experimental applied and industrial research fields The emergence of technical acoustics and electroacoustics illustrates a scientific field at the intersection of science and technology Wittje starts with Helmholtz s and Rayleigh s work and its intersection with telegraphy and early wireless and continues with the industrialization of acoustics during World War I when sound measurement was automated and electrical engineering and radio took over the concept of noise Researchers no longer appealed to the musically trained ear to understand sound but to the thinking and practices of electrical engineering

Finally Wittje covers the demilitarization of acoustics during the Weimar Republic and its remilitarization at the beginning of the Third Reich. He shows how technical acoustics fit well with the Nazi dismissal of pure science representing everything that German Physics under National Socialism should be experimental, applied, and relevant to the military. Electricity, 1918
