A Dictionary of Sports Studies , Watching Sport Stephen Mumford,2013-03-01 Do we watch sport for pure dumb entertainment While some people might do so Stephen Mumford argues that it can be watched in other ways Sport can be both a subject of high aesthetic values and a valid source for our moral education The philosophy of sport has tended to focus on participation but this book instead examines the philosophical issues around watching sport Far from being a passive experience we can all shape the way that we see sport Delving into parallels with art and theatre this book outlines the aesthetic qualities of sport from the incidental beauty of a well executed football pass to the enshrined artistic interpretation in performed sports such as ice skating and gymnastics It is argued that the purist literally sees sport in a different way from the partisan thus the aesthetic perception of the purist can be validated The book moves on to examine the moral lessons that are to be learned from watching sport depicting it as a contest of virtues The morality of sport is demonstrated to be continuous with rather than separate from the morality in wider life and so each can inform the other Watching sport is then recognized as a focus of profound emotional experiences Collective emotion is particularly considered alongside the nature of allegiance Finally Mumford considers why we care about sport at all Addressing universal themes this book will appeal to a broad audience across philosophical disciplines and sports studies

many probing questions First of all how are the interests preferences and attitudes of university youth to academic sports and a healthy lifestyle shaped To what extent does the current media offer related to the mentioned topics remain compatible with them at the level of national and academic media What are the strengths and weaknesses of the Polish system of media messages regarding academic sports and a lifestyle conducive to health Secondly attempts were made to answer the question to what extent contemporary university audio visual media can support the concept of influencing the student community in popularising physical activity Thirdly To what extent can contemporary social media available on the internet support the notion of influencing the student environment by promoting physical activity Finally How can the information selection and thematic scope be shaped to influence the academic community in furthering sports effectively We hope that this work will contribute to the proper use of all available media communication channels to improve the physical condition and health of the Z or C i e Connected generation They do not know life and the world without the network
