A vibrant, stylized illustration of two children walking away from the viewer on a dirt path in a park. The child on the left is a girl with brown hair in a ponytail, wearing a white shirt, blue pants, and a pink backpack. The child on the right is a boy with brown hair, wearing a light blue shirt, dark pants, and a pink backpack. They are walking on a path that is covered with fallen pink cherry blossom petals. The path is flanked by large, mature trees with thick trunks and lush green grass. In the background, more trees with pink blossoms are visible, and a soft, warm light filters through the canopy, creating a magical atmosphere. The overall scene is bright and cheerful, capturing the essence of a spring day.

Short subject films have a long history in American cinemas. These could be anywhere from 2 to 40 minutes long and were used as a filler in a picture show that would include a cartoon, a newsreel, possibly a serial, and a short before launching into the feature film. Shorts could tackle any topic of interest: an unusual travelogue, a comedy, musical, revues, sports, nature, or popular vaudeville acts. With the advent of sound on film in the mid to late 1920s, makers of earlier silent short subjects began experimenting with the short films, using them as a testing ground for the use of sound in feature movies. After the Second World War and the rising popularity of television, short subject films became far too expensive to produce and they had mostly disappeared from the screens by the late 1950s. This encyclopedia offers comprehensive listings of American short subject films from the 1920s through the 1950s.      Bowker's Directory of Videocassettes for Children 1999 R. R.
