

But what happens in multiplying two sine waves when the frequencies of the two sine waves is the same? Why does this result not hold?

Multiplying two identical sine waves (i.e., squaring it) produces a sine wave of twice the frequency but shifted in phase and amplitude:

Average Sample:

0.0

This is consistent with the "half angle formula" for cos:

$$\sin^2 x = \frac{1 - \cos(2x)}{2}$$

0.25

(Obvious) Note: All the values in the squared wave are ≥ 0 . Average is > 0 .

Fast Circuit Boards Ralph Morrison, 2018-01-31 An essential guide to modern circuit board design based on simple physics and practical applications The fundamentals taught in circuit theory were never intended to work above a few megahertz let alone at a gigahertz While electronics is grounded in physics most engineers education in this area is too general and mathematical to be easily applied to the problem of high speed circuits Left to their own devices many engineers produce layouts that require expensive revisions in order to finally meet specifications Fast Circuit Boards fills the gap in knowledge by providing clear down to earth guidance on designing digital circuit boards that function at high clock rates By making the direct connection between physics and fast circuits this book instills the fundamental universal principles of information transfer to give engineers a solid basis for hardware design Using simple tools simple physics and simple language this invaluable resource walks through basic electrostatics magnetism wave mechanics and more to bring the right technology down to the working level Designed to be directly relevant and immediately useful to circuit board designers this book Properly explains the problems of fast logic and the appropriate tools Applies basic principles of physics to the art of laying out circuit boards Simplifies essential concepts scaled up to the gigahertz level saving time money and the need for revisions Goes beyond circuit theory to provide a deep intuitive
