countryside For many decades rural migration has been a selective process resulting in the most enterprising and self motivated people leaving the rural periphery The new agricultural operators representing nascent but aggressive Russian agribusiness have difficulty co-opting traditional rural communities afflicted by profound social dysfunction The contrast between agriculture in proximity to large cities and in their hinterlands is as sharp as ever and some vacant niches are increasingly occupied by ethnically non-Russian migrants All of these conditions existed to some degree in pre-Soviet times but they have been exacerbated since Russia took steps toward a market economy Understudied and often underestimated in the West the crisis facing Russian agriculture has profound implications for the political and economic stability of Russia The authors see hope in the significant increase in land use intensity on vastly diminished farmland The lessons gathered from this thoroughly researched study are far-reaching and relevant to the disciplines of Slavic and European studies agriculture political science economics and human geography
