Successful ICT Projects in Excel P. M. Heathcote,2000      Successful ICT Projects in Word P. M. Heathcote,2000      Successful ICT Projects and Core Team Alignment in Internally Focused Organisations David Colin Bryant,2016 Abstract When choosing ICT project team members the continuing ICT skills shortage has encouraged a focus on eligibility criteria experience qualifications availability at the expense of suitability criteria such as complementary fit between team members and supplementary fit level of congruence between team member values and the organisational culture This research argues that more attention is required to suitability criteria particularly for the Key persons in ICT projects as they approach project completion and benefits realisation The research examines successful ICT projects where success is interpreted in terms of stakeholder satisfaction The subjects were finalists in a Project Management Achievement Award competition where stakeholder satisfaction was necessary for this public scrutiny The analysis occurred after project completion and during the benefits realisation phase A critical realist case study approach is used to test a deduced theoretical construct known as core team alignment Following theory testing propositions are abducted to explain a causal link from core team alignment through to project success The contingent conditions included projects situated in strong internally focused organisational cultures that involve 20-30 staff over 2-3 years in business related endeavours

Structured Equation Modeling for Determining ICT Project Success Factors Nazeer Joseph, Carl Marnewick, Project Management Institute, 2014 Projects irrespective of type and industry are initiated to provide value to the organization This is also the case of information communication and technology ICT projects which have become an integral part of any organization The problem is that ICT projects do not have a good track record are failing most of the time and do not provide value to the organization This has been an on going phenomenon for over a decade This article focuses on two aspects regarding ICT projects the first is to investigate the factors that contribute to project success and secondly how these factors contribute individually as well as collectively to ICT project success A scientific model that indicates how success factors influence project success has not been attempted before and such a model adds to the current body of knowledge A quantitative approach was followed in which survey respondents were requested to classify their ICT projects as successful challenged or failed They also had to indicate how project outcome is measured as well as the factors that influence it Structural equation modeling was done to determine if and how any single factor contributes to project outcome The model revealed that stakeholder management communication and methodology are the driving factors behind ICT project success and that they are positively correlated to one another The model can be applied by ICT project managers thus ensuring a better project success rate This model also opens the door for more debate regarding ICT project success and the manner in which various factors contribute to project success

Sustainable Development Through ICT Mathew J. Manimala,Jay Mitra,2014 The emergence and wide spread use of Information and Communication Technology ICT in various fields is considered rightly so the most powerful tool for achieving the developmental objectives of the world s poorest regions However a review of the ICT projects in the less developed regions has shown that most of such projects have not survived beyond their sponsor supported life Further reviews of the literature and the study of two illustrative cases of successful ICT projects one from the private and the other from the public sector have brought out a few essential ingredients necessary for the effective use of ICT for sustainable development which are identified as entrepreneurial action feasible revenue model felt need for the project technology involvement of the user community pilot start up on a small scale and technical support on a continuous basis One of the oft neglected implications of these findings is that the implementation of a new technology should be preceded by the development of the general capabilities of the people in the region so that they would be able to make effective use of the new technology beyond the initial period of sponsor support
