Researching the Socio-Political Dimensions of Mathematics Education Paola Valero, Robyn Zevenbergen, 2006-04-11 Mathematics education research as a discipline is situated at the confluence of an array of diffuse seemingly incommensurable and radically divergent discourses Research claims that have grown out of mathematics education are wide ranging and antagonistic rather than circumscribed by hidebound disciplinary frames While there has never been a unified totalising discipline of knowledge labelled mathematics education research and while it has always been a contested terrain it is fair to say that the master paradigm out of which this field has been generated has been that of cognitive psychology Mainstream mathematics education knowledges refracting the master discourse of psychology whereby cognition serves as the central privileged and defining concept clearly delimits its possibilities for serving as a social tool of democratic transformation The central point of departure of this new collection is that mathematics education research is insufficiently univocal to support the type of uncompromising interpretation that cognitive psychologists would bring to it The hallmark contribution of this pathbreaking volume edited by Paola Valero and Robyn Zevenbergen is the paradigmatic shift the authors have effected in the field of mathematics education research taking up a position at the faultline of socio cultural analysis and critical pedagogy

Realism and Educational Research David Scott, 2002-01-04 Although the literature of social research covers a vast range of material, there has been little on the role of social theory in educational research. In this respect, David Scott's book covers an important gap in the market as it focuses on the centrality of social theory in a variety of empirical projects. The volume covers a range of conceptual and theoretical discussions and subsequently applies these concepts to our analysis of empirical studies. As a consequence, it is a volume that deserves to be read widely by students and researchers alike.

Biography and Education Michael Erben, 2005-08-12 Over recent years, biographical studies have gained an increasingly important place in academic study. The two are inextricably linked. Education uses biography in teaching and in biography education features strongly as a formative stage in personal development. This book elaborates on the analytical work that has drawn attention to biography and education and seeks to expand the understanding of lives in educational contexts. Mainstream sociology has been quick to embrace this treatment of individuals as biographical appearances, but it is even more relevant in the field of education.

Doing Research About Education Geoffrey Walford, 2003-09-02 This book brings together semi-autobiographical accounts from major educationalists about their influential research focusing on the practical and personal aspects of the research process. The collection reflects the great changes that have occurred within educational research since the 1980s and deals with the issues and situations of the late 1990s. It includes accounts that cover the various stages of the research process, a sampling of topics, the diversity of methodologies used in educational research and a range of theoretical perspectives. There is coverage of qualitative and quantitative methodologies and of large and smaller scale research. Also discussed are ESRC programme research, contract research and theoretical research. Practitioner-Based Enquiry Brenda Lawrence, Louis Murray, 2013-04-15. This book has been written specifically for postgraduate students carrying out small scale research projects in and around their work environments and for those undertaking research projects as part of their higher education courses. The book will also be useful to teachers, tutors, lecturers and trainers who want to use the concept of practitioner based enquiry to enquire into their own institutional practices and produce reports which can be submitted for academic credits leading to the award of certificates and degrees from universities and other professional bodies.
