In 1945 Germany's cities lay in ruins destroyed by Allied bombers that left major architectural monuments badly damaged and much of the housing stock reduced to rubble. At the war's end observers thought that it would take forty years to rebuild but by the late 1950s West Germany's cities had risen anew. The housing crisis had been overcome and virtually all important monuments reconstructed and the cities had reclaimed their characteristic identities. Everywhere there was a mixture of old and new historic churches and town halls stood alongside new housing and department stores; ancient street layouts were crossed or encircled by wide arteries; old city centers were balanced by garden suburbs laid out according to modern planning principles. In this book Diefendorf examines the questions raised by this remarkable feat of urban reconstruction. He explains who was primarily responsible, what accounted for the speed of rebuilding and how priorities were set and decisions acted upon. He argues that in such crucial areas as architectural style, urban planning, historic preservation and housing policy the Germans drew upon personnel, ideas, institutions and practical experiences from the Nazi and pre-Nazi periods. Diefendorf shows how the rebuilding of West Germany's cities after 1945 can only be understood in terms of long-term continuities in urban development. The Encyclopædia Britannica: Shuvalov-Subliminal Self, 1911. Stav - Ster Hilmar Schmuck, Willi Gorzny, Peter Geils, 2020-09-07. Keine ausführliche Beschreibung für Stav Ster verfügbar. Cityscaping Therese Fuhrer, Felix Mundt, Jan Stenger, 2015-05-19. The term cityscaping is here introduced to characterise the creative process through which the image of the city is created and represented in various media: text, film and artefacts. It thus turns attention away from built urban spaces and onto mental images of cities. One focus is on the question of which literary, visual and acoustic means prompt their recipients' spatial imagination; another is to inquire into the semantics and functions that are ascribed to the image of a city as constructed in various media. The examples of ancient texts and works of art and modern literature and films are used to elucidate the artistic potential of images of the city and the techniques by which they are semanticised. With its interdisciplinary approach the volume for the first time makes clear how strongly mental images of urban space both ancient and modern have been shaped by the techniques of their representation in media.
