to announce that for the first time since 1940 Allied air forces were operating from France and that within three weeks of D Day 31 Allied squadrons were operating from the beach head bases In their forecasts for the first three months following D Day the planners plotted the number of the advanced landing grounds that would be required in Normandy to support the Allied air forces up to September 1944 Using maps and aerial photographs individual sites were surveyed and plans drawn up so that when each location was captured either US Aviation Engineers the Royal Engineers or RAF Airfield Construction Wings could move in without delay to begin work to build them This book tells the story of every airfield that became operational by D 90 explaining the methods used to construct them and the units that flew from them The vast majority of the temporary airstrips have now been returned to the farmland from which they came but by using engineers plans from the period and modern aerial photographs we have portrayed the sites in true After the Battle fashion as they were then and as they are today Where Eagles Roost Jerold Edward Brown,1977 British Airfields of the Second World War Stuart Hadaway,2020 Airfields of the Eighth Then and Now Roger Anthony Freeman, 1978 This work is a nostalgic look at the airfields used by the Eighth in the United Kingdom during the World War II Conceived in war the airfields experienced their moments of glory and when the war ended were left empty and derelict to die The few which remain virtually intact have only survived because some private or public concern has formed a practical use for them although not always as airfields Some of the more remote airfields still dot the countryside the same as when the last plane left their runways and the last truck departed through the main gate They are bleak windswept and mouldering but they retain the atmosphere of the fine high endeavours of the people who inhabited them and the aura of ineffable sadness that hangs over memorials to fighting men
