

Personal Marketing Plan Sample

In order to ensure that you show yourself in the most attractive light to prospective employers, and the search and selection recruitment firms, you need to develop your Personal Marketing Plan. There are several steps within this and ideally you should try to complete each before you start actively looking for a new role.

Step One

If you haven't got a CV then you need to prepare one. If you have, then you need to ensure that it is up to date and in a usable format.

Step Two

Take plenty of time to decide what you are looking for; if you do not know then it will be much harder to find it! Carefully analyse what you want from your next role and write down these criteria which should cover:

- The role itself
- The sector you wish to work in
- The type of company - small, large, public, private, independent etc
- Location - decide if you are going to commute, travel or relocate
- Your salary expectations - set a minimum basic salary and minimum benefits package

Step Three

Think carefully about your strengths and weaknesses, what you enjoy in a role and what you don't - and be honest and realistic with yourself. Ask your partner or friends what they think and if they agree with you. If you have done any psychometric tests recently then carefully go through them to find pointers to this. It is likely that you will be asked questions on your ability and experience at interview so this will help you to prepare. It will also help you with Step Four.

Step Four

Prepare your 30 second commercial. Imagine you have 30 seconds to tell a prospective employer what you do and why they should employ you - what would you say? If you are a Manufacturing Manager you might say:

I am a manufacturing manager in the plastics sector and have ten years' experience...'
or you could say: 'For the last ten years I have helped my company to maximise their manufacturing efficiency and profitability by identifying areas of improvement and developing their processes, helping to take them to number one in the plastics sector'
