NCSALL Occasional Paper Clare L. Strawn, 2003 This study of social capital employs data from the Longitudinal Study of Adult Learning LSAL funded by the National Center for the Study of Adult Learning and Literacy NCSALL and conducted at Portland State University to increase understanding of the learning process of adults with limited formal education It provides longitudinal data on how people continue learning in multiple contexts through formal adult education programs and in their daily lives This paper is presented in two sections The first is a theoretical exploration of the intersections of critical literacy adult learning and social capital theories The intent of this discussion is to introduce key concepts from multiple disciplines and develop a synthetic model of social capital influences on lifelong learning SCILL in which adults construct their social environment and the discourses that influence their learning strategies The second section empirically tests a piece of the SCILL Model related to the structural and discursive dimensions of social capital using data from the first wave of the LSAL Multiple measures of social capital are detailed The author argues that in addition to the structural dimension of social capital local discourse generated through interaction is an interpretive dimension of social capital The discussion ties the empirical and theoretical elements offering implications for the study of adult education participation in adult education for research on social capital Appendices include 1 Longitudinal Study of Adult Literacy Study Design 2 Instrument Items from LSAL Wave 1 3 Confirmatory Factor Analysis of Lifelong Learning 4 Tables of Descriptive Statistics and Univariate Analyses of Indicators 5 Items Parameters in Final Models and 6 Model Calibration Contains 18 tables 3 figures and 6 footnotes Lifelong Learning, Intergenerational Learning, and Social Capital Ann Kristin Boström, 2003

Do Acquaintances and Friends Make Us Learn? Social Capital and Lifelong Learning in Germany Anna-Elisabeth Thum,Miroslav Bablavy,2014 This paper examines the relationship between social capital and adult learning We test this association empirically using measures of various types of social capital and adult learning based on the German Socioeconomic Panel We use predetermined measures of social capital to exclude social skills or friends encountered during the adult education class Fixed effects for latent underlying factors such as deep personality traits and instrumental variables account for changing personality traits We find that most of our social capital measures have a significant and positive impact on the probabilities for investing in various types of adult learning The size of the effect varies across the different measures between increasing the probability of participating in adult learning by 0.04% to increasing the probability by 17% We find evidence that acquaintances are more likely to increase participation in adult learning than friends

School Improvement Zijian Li,Michael Williams,2006 School improvement is at the centre of educational reform and is perceived by many as a key to social and economic advance It contributes to determining the personal fulfilment and career paths of individual students and consequently engages the interest of parents and community members. It is an ever-present commitment of teachers and managers in schools. Policy makers and politicians at international, national and local levels devote much time and effort to their search for better schools. School improvement has also attracted the attention of researchers and scholars in many countries. They have been drawn from various disciplines and fields within the educational studies community including psychology, sociology, history, evaluation and studies in curriculum and assessment. There is now an established body of findings from studies conducted in many contexts. This book brings together leading experts drawn from many countries and several continents reflecting diverse approaches to educational policy and practice evaluation and research. Variations between countries and between local communities within countries are highlighted. The possibilities and difficulties inherent in transferring evidence from one educational system at a number of levels to another are clearly discussed. What emerges from the cross-national and cross-cultural evidence are several significant threads currently under active investigation including school structure and management, classroom organisation, school leadership, teacher training and staff development, curriculum and assessment, community involvement, lifelong learning and special provision for students with special educational needs. School Improvement: International Perspectives is written for national educational policy makers, teachers and student teachers, governing bodies and parents from various levels of schooling and university researchers and scholars. Social Capital, Professionalism and Diversity, 2009-01-01

Social Capital, Professionalism and Diversity is a response to the challenges faced by teachers and other public sector professionals in attempting to manage an increasingly diverse population whilst simultaneously being subjected to public scrutiny through measures of performance. Social capital has increasingly been seen by policy makers and academics as a possible resource for education, allowing children and young people and the professionals who work with them to do better as a result of having strong networks, relationships and trust. There has, however, been little attention to how social capital might actually be used by professionals within educational contexts or to the benefits of enhanced social capital for children and young people, their families and the professionals themselves. The contributors to this volume provide commentaries on what is known about social capital and its use in educational contexts, the engagement of teachers and other professionals with diversity and social capital, and diversity among children, young people and families. Social Capital, Professionalism and Diversity will appeal to teacher educators and policymakers with concerns about the challenges faced by teachers and other public sector professionals and with an interest in how social capital might enable an effective response to diversity in educational contexts. The book will be of particular interest and use to student and beginning teachers in responding to diversity as they develop their own professional identities and to practising teachers with an interest in pursuing new forms of professional renewal. Adult and Continuing Education: Concepts, Methodologies, Tools, and Applications

Management Association, Information Resources, 2014-03-31. Beyond the undergraduate and graduate levels, education has traditionally ceased when students enter the workforce as professionals in their respective fields. However, recent trends in education have found that adult students beyond the traditional university age often benefit greatly from returning to further their education. Adult and Continuing Education: Concepts, Methodologies, Tools, and Applications investigates some of the most promising trends in furthering education and professional development in a variety of settings and industries. With an extensive array of chapters on topics ranging from non-traditional students to online and distance education for adult learners, this multi-volume reference book will provide students, educators, and industry professionals with the tools necessary to make the most of their return to the classroom.

The Learning Society and people with learning difficulties Riddell, Sheila, Baron, Stephen, 2001-05-16. There is a growing concern about the social exclusion of a range of minority groups, including people with learning difficulties. Lifelong learning is seen as one of the central means of challenging the exclusion of this group but also of enhancing their economic status. This book demonstrates that policy based on human capital premises has produced forms of lifelong learning which exacerbate the marginalisation of people with learning difficulties. The Learning Society and people with learning difficulties reviews the range of policy fields which increasingly intervene in the lifelong learning arena, maps the agencies involved in service delivery and describes their sometimes conflicting ethos. It provides in-depth accounts of the lived experiences of individuals with learning difficulties as they navigate lifelong learning options. Its exploration of the links between community care, education, training, employment, housing, and benefits policies in the context of lifelong learning is unique. This book makes a significant contribution to debates about how people with learning difficulties may achieve social inclusion and the part which lifelong learning may play in this. It is therefore invaluable reading for policy makers, practitioners, and academics interested in these issues.

Reconceptualising Lifelong Learning Sue Jackson, Penny Jane Burke, 2007-05-10. Arising from work by the Gender and Lifelong Learning Group of the Gender and Education Association, this book presents reconceptualisations of lifelong learning. It argues that the current field of lifelong learning is based on certain hidden values and assumptions and examines the mechanisms by which exclusionary discourses and practices are reproduced and maintained. The book opens up ways of conceptualising learning that takes into account multiple and shifting formations of learners from different social contexts. The authors broaden what counts as learning and who counts as a learner, offering different understandings of lifelong learning that are able to include currently marginalised values and principles. Organised in four sections, the book looks at reclaiming it, draws on feminist and post-structural conceptual frameworks to create a critical analysis of the current field of lifelong learning, retelling it, tells the tales of different multi-positions in lifelong learning, revisioning it, moves from narrative to analysis, and the authors present their revisioning of learning which provides the tools to reconceptualise the field of lifelong learning, reconstructing it, furthers the discussion to outline new approaches to and practices in lifelong learning.
