Africa's Development in Historical Perspective Emmanuel Akyeampong, Robert H. Bates, Nathan Nunn, James Robinson, 2014-08-11 Why has Africa remained persistently poor over its recorded history Has Africa always been poor What has been the nature of Africa s poverty and how do we explain its origins This volume takes a necessary interdisciplinary approach to these questions by bringing together perspectives from archaeology linguistics history anthropology political science and economics Several contributors note that Africa s development was at par with many areas of Europe in the first millennium of the Common Era Why Africa fell behind is a key theme in this volume with insights that should inform Africa s developmental strategies

Textiles Trade and the Developing Countries Carl Hamilton, 1990 The papers contained in this volume deal with two central issues The first is the positive question of the effects of the Multifibre Arrangement MFA on developing countries The second is the normative question of how to phase out the MFA and integrate textiles and clothing trade in the normal GATT rules in the context of the current Uruguay Round of multilateral trade negotiations The major effects of the MFA considered are the direct trade restricting effects of the bilateral quotas their effects on prices of textiles and clothing in restricted and unrestricted markets and hence on national and global welfare the effects on fiber trade the various inefficiencies introduced by the MFA and its administration and finally the implications of the arrangement for growth in the developing economies These effects are discussed at a general level in the first part of this report The second part contains a discussion of the effects of the MFA on particular countries In considering the options for reforming the MFA it was recognized that the successive arrangements reflected the pressures placed on governments by powerful interest groups and that these pressures had to be taken into account in formulating proposals for policy reform In this context a wide range of reform proposals was considered
