Levine, 2008-09-15 It is one thing to lament the financial pressures put on universities quite another to face up to the poverty of resources for thinking about what universities should do when they purport to offer a liberal education In Powers of the Mind former University of Chicago dean Donald N Levine enriches those resources by proposing fresh ways to think about liberal learning with ideas more suited to our times He does so by defining basic values of modernity and then considering curricular principles pertinent to them The principles he favors are powers of the mind disciplines understood as fields of study defined not by subject matter but by their embodiment of distinct intellectual capacities To illustrate Levine draws on his own lifetime of teaching and educational leadership while providing a marvelous summary of exemplary educational thinkers at the University of Chicago who continue to inspire Out of this vital tradition Powers of the Mind constructs a paradigm for liberal arts today inclusive of all perspectives and applicable to all settings in the modern world      Ideas of Religion John Edward Sullivan, 1979-08-06 Ideas of religion are the principal subject of this work It is perhaps not commonly enough realized that important consequences follow from ideas or definitions of religion What religion is or what it consists in is a question that concerns everyone believer and unbeliever alike That man is the only religious animal few if any would deny That every human is religious many but not all would deny If the latter were true then no human is without some religion It all depends on one s idea of religion      The Bloomsbury Encyclopedia of Philosophers in America John R.
