John S. Gilkeson, 2010-09-20 This book examines the intersection of cultural anthropology and American cultural nationalism from 1886 when Franz Boas left Germany for the United States until 1965 when the National Endowment for the Humanities was established Five chapters trace the development within academic anthropology of the concepts of culture social class national character value and civilization and their dissemination to non anthropologists As Americans came to think of culture anthropologically as a complex whole far broader and more inclusive than Matthew Arnold s the best which has been thought and said so too did they come to see American communities as stratified into social classes distinguished by their subcultures to attribute the making of the American character to socialization rather than birth to locate the distinctiveness of American culture in its unconscious canons of choice and to view American culture and civilization in a global perspective

Of States and Cities Peter Marcuse, Ronald van Kempen, 2002 The nature and effects of globalization are coming under critical scrutiny across all continents This book focuses on one aspect the globalization of cities It examines the claim that the state is powerless to influence events and that history geography and culture have become irrelevant in the worldwide trend towards a uniform urban model a model which features increased segregation decline of the central city and social polarization The international team of contributors is well placed to put these claims in perspective Drawing on their experiences of cities as diverse as New York and Warsaw Istanbul and Sao Paulo they demonstrate that states and cities have adopted widely varying approaches to the advent of globalization and that its impact has been constrained by each city s history physical layout location environment role in the international economy and demographic composition The diversity of
