across a variety of spatial scales It highlights the need for a geographical conceptualization of the different ways in which household level energy deprivation both influences and is contingent upon disparities occurring at a wider range of spatial scales There is a strong focus on the relationships among energy transformation institutional change and place based factors in determining the nature and location of energy related injustices The book also explores how patterns and structures of energy poverty have changed over time as evidenced by some of the common measures used to describe the condition In part this means investigating the makeup of energy poor demographics across various social and spatial cleavages More broadly it also argues that energy sector reconfigurations are both reflected in and shaped by various domains of social and political organization especially in terms of creating poverty relevant outcomes

Community Action and Climate Change Jennifer Kent, 2015-11-19 The failure of recent international negotiations to progress global action on climate change has shifted attention to the emergence of grassroots sustainability initiatives These civil society networks display the potential to implement social innovation and change processes from the bottom up Recent scholarship has sought to theorise grassroots community based low carbon practices in terms of their sustainability transition potential However there are few empirical examples that demonstrate the factors for success of community based social innovations in achieving more widespread adoption outside of their local sustainability niche The book seeks to address two significant gaps related to grassroots climate action firstly the continuing dominance of the individualisation of responsibility for climate change action which presupposes that individuals hold both the ability and desire to shift their behaviours and lifestyle choices to align with a low carbon future Secondly the potential for community based collectives to influence mainstream climate change governance an area significantly under researched Drawing on empirical research into Australian Climate Action Groups CAGs and related international research the book argues that grassroots community based collective action on climate change holds the key to broader social change This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of climate change citizen participation environmental sociology and sustainable development
