John Stuart 1806-1873 Mill

The Life Of John Stuart Mill:

Autobiography of John Stuart Mill John Stuart Mill, 1924 Autobiography John Stuart Mill, 2018-03-07 It may be useful that there should be some record of an education which was unusual and remarkable John Stuart Mill 1806-73 philosopher economist and political thinker was the most prominent figure of nineteenth century English intellectual life and his work has continuing significance for contemporary debates about ethics politics and economics His father James Mill a close associate of the utilitarian philosopher Jeremy Bentham assumed responsibility for his eldest son's education teaching him ancient Greek at the age of three and equipping him with a broad knowledge of the physical and moral sciences of the day Mill's Autobiography was written to give an account of the extraordinary education he received at the hands of his father and to express his gratitude to those he saw as influencing his thought but it is also an exercise in self-analysis and an attempt to vindicate himself against claims that he was the product of hothousing The Autobiography also acknowledges the substantial contribution made to Mill's thinking and writings by Harriet Taylor whom he met when he was twenty-four and married twenty-one years later after the death of her husband The Autobiography helps us understand more fully some of the principal commitments that Mill's political philosophy has become famous for in particular his appreciation of the diversity plurality and complexity of ways of life and their possibilities This edition of the Autobiography includes additional manuscript materials from earlier drafts which demonstrate the conflicting imperatives that influenced Mill's choice of exactly what to say about some of the most significant episodes and relationships in his life Mark Philips' introduction explores the forces that led Mill to write the life and points to the tensions in the text and in Mill's life Autobiography John Stuart Mill John Stuart Mill, 2015-11-18 It seems proper that I should prefix to the following biographical sketch some mention of the reasons which have made me think it desirable that I should leave behind me such a memorial of so uneventful a life as mine I do not for a moment imagine that any part of what I have to relate can be interesting to the public as a narrative or as being connected with myself But I have thought that in an age in which education and its improvement are the subject of more if not of profounder study than at any former period of English history it may be useful that there should be some record of an education which was unusual and remarkable and which whatever else it may have done has proved how much more than is commonly supposed may be taught and well taught in those early years which in the common modes of what is called instruction are little better than wasted It has also seemed to me that in an age of transition in opinions there may be somewhat both of interest and of benefit in noting the successive phases of any mind which was always pressing forward equally ready to learn and to unlearn either from its own thoughts or from those of others But a motive which weighs more with me than either of these is a desire to make acknowledgment of the debts which my intellectual and moral development owes to other persons some of them of recognised eminence others less known than they deserve to be and the one to whom most of all is due one whom the world had no opportunity of knowing The reader whom these things do not interest has only himself to blame if he reads farther and I do not desire any other indulgence from him than that of bearing in mind that for him these pages were not written I was born in London on the 20th of May 1806 and was the eldest son of James Mill the author of the History of British India My father the son of a petty tradesman and I believe small farmer at Northwater Bridge in the county of Angus was when a boy recommended by his abilities to the notice of Sir John Stuart of Fettercairn one of the Barons of the Exchequer in Scotland and was in consequence sent to the University of Edinburgh at the expense of a fund established by Lady Jane Stuart the wife of Sir John Stuart and some other ladies for educating young men for the Scottish Church He there went through the usual course of study and was licensed as a Preacher but never followed the profession having satisfied himself that he could not believe the doctrines of that or any other Church For a few years he was a private tutor in various families in Scotland among others that of the Marquis of Tweeddale but ended by taking up his residence in London and devoting himself to authorship Nor had he any other means of support until 1819 when he obtained an appointment in the India House
