Technical Report, 1976 Grassland structure and function L.F. Huenneke, H.A. Mooney, 2012-12-06 The chapters in this volume are based on a symposium for studying the links between California grasslands structure abiotic and biotic components and productivity supported by the National Science Foundation The primary objective of the symposium was to integrate the current and system level phenomena in a well studied understanding of controls on ecosystem structure and function Unfortunately some areas of current and function with the approaches of population research e.g. nutrient cycling are under development The annual grasslands are represented in this volume For other topics eminently suitable for experimental and manipulation particularly the role of invertebrate consumers the lack of data from the annual grassland studies of ecosystem processes The short lives and small stature of the component plants brought a broader grassland perspective plant species make experimental work far more difficult Together however the contributions illustrate practical approaches in studying the controls on the importance of different ecological adaptations in prairies The system's small scale approaches in studying the controls on structure patchiness and the obvious importance of structure and function of a complex system the region's mediterranean climate in the life cycle of the annual vegetation afford many L F Huenneke and H A Mooney Huenneke L F and Mooney H eds
