through the crystal clear waters of the Cerulean Deep casting dancing patterns of light across the coral gardens that surrounded the underwater city of Aquatica Nerida glided gracefully between the towering kelp forests her iridescent tail catching the filtered sunlight as she swam toward the ancient Library of Tides As the youngest member of the Council of Depths she carried the weight of her people s future in her webbed hands The merfolk of Aquatica had thrived for millennia in the deepest trenches of the Pacific far from the surface world that their ancestors once knew Their city was a marvel of organic architecture with spiraling towers grown from living coral and streets paved with polished abalone shells

Bioluminescent plants provided a gentle glow throughout the underwater metropolis while schools of tropical fish swam freely through the open spaces creating a living tapestry of color and movement Nerida s emerald tail propelled her effortlessly through the water as she contemplated the ancient prophecy that had consumed her thoughts for weeks According to the texts preserved in the Library of Tides every mermaid possessed a destined mate a soul bond that transcended the boundaries between land and sea The prophecy spoke of a time when the barriers between worlds would thin and true love would bridge the gap between the ocean s children and those who walked upon the earth She had always been skeptical of such romantic notions preferring to focus on her duties as a keeper of ancient knowledge At twenty three years old Nerida was considered young for her position but her dedication to preserving the wisdom of her people had earned her respect among the elders Her long silver hair floated around her shoulders like liquid moonlight and her blue green eyes held a depth of knowledge that belied her youth      The CERCular ,1993      Introduction to the Biology of
