Old Northumbrian Verbal Morphosyntax and the (Northern) Subject Rule Marcelle Cole, 2014-07-15 This volume provides both a quantitative statistical and qualitative analysis of Late Northumbrian verbal morphosyntax as recorded in the Old English interlinear gloss to the Lindisfarne Gospels It focuses in particular on the attestation of the subject type and adjacency constraints that characterise the so called Northern Subject Rule concord system The study presents new evidence which challenges the traditional Early Middle English dating attributed to the emergence of subject type concord in the North of England and demonstrates that the syntactic configuration of the Northern Subject Rule was already a feature of Old English By setting the Northumbrian developments within a broad framework of diachronic and diatopic variation in which manifestations of subject type concord are explored in a wide range of varieties of English the author argues that a concord system based on subject type rather than person number features is in fact a far less local and more universal tendency in English than previously believed

Farming the North Sea Coast, 900-2000 Piet van Cruyningen, 2025-04

The author opens a powerful dialogue between agricultural history on the one hand and environmental history on the other a brilliant and provocative synthesis of a thousand years of coastal farming Tim Soens University of Antwerp Belgium The fascinating story of how the North Sea coast has been farmed is ever changing Long before the industrial revolution the inhospitable fens and marshes of the low lying coastal wetlands on both sides of the Sea had been transformed into one of the most productive agricultural regions in Europe Agriculture in the coastlands reached its apogee during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries as is witnessed by the many impressive farm buildings established then However more recently it has become clear that lowland farming and even the physical existence of the lowlands are in jeopardy owing to rising sea levels and problems of drainage This book offers a history of farming and water management on the North Sea coast assessing the forces driving and inhibiting agricultural progress more broadly It examines the ways in which farmers in the past dealt with the two main constraints on their decision making the natural environment and the human environment of institutional rules and customs regulating behaviour It looks in particular at how setbacks were overcome and how farming practices were improved which then raised the money with which to finance the maintenance of dykes canals and sluices
