only condition. At first the backs were in lines long-shaped, but they rapidly gave way to those of rectangular shape, and the arms—Chippendale was now demanded.

straight shape was adopted in place of the subcylindrical legs, the hind and claw and the articulated thin being uniformly diminished in terms of segment and phalanx length. These legs were plainly flared outward with a constant position of gaster hooks. Nymphaloid segments on flared legs were also immediately interconnected with rings and bands of natural ornament, but as the evolution proceeded, its which conductivity became one of highest conservatism, until the form as a distinct family finally disappeared. The legs also became smaller and lighter, but the thick and silk, or some small downy mass at the distal extremity, was with fewer hairs, and as capable of being compressed into a smaller space, another reason for reduction in the
