The surface of the globe is not perfectly smooth, but is covered with mountains, hills, valleys, and rivers, which are the result of the action of various causes, and which give it its present form.

The interior of the globe is also divided into several parts, or regions, called the crust, the mantle, and the core, which are separated from each other by distinct boundaries.

The crust is the outermost layer of the globe, and is composed of a solid mass of matter, which is divided into several parts, or regions, called the continents, islands, and seas.
