The Cambridge Social History of Britain, 1750-1950 F. M. L. Thompson, 1990 Whilst in certain quarters it may be fashionable to suppose that there is no such thing as society historians have had no difficulty in finding their subject The difficulty rather is that the advance has occurred through such an outpouring of research and writing that it is hard for anyone but the specialist to keep up with the literature or grasp the overall picture In these three volumes as is the tradition in Cambridge Histories a team of specialists has assembled the jigsaw of recent monographic research and presented an interpretation of the development of modern British society since 1750 from three complementary perspectives those of regional communities of the working and living environment and of social institutions Each volume is self contained and each contribution thematically defined contains its own chronology of the period under review Taken as a whole they offer an authoritative and comprehensive view of the manner and method of the shaping of society in the two centuries of unprecedented demographic and economic change Inside European Identities Sharon Macdonald, 2020-08-27

Community health and wellbeing Cropper, Steve,Porter, Alison,2007-10-22 Improving health in populations in which health is poor is a complex process This book argues that the traditional government approach of exhorting individuals to live healthier lifestyles is not enough action to promote public health needs to take place not just through public agencies but also by engaging community assets and resources in their broadest sense The book reports lessons from the experience of planning establishing and delivering such action by the five year Sustainable Health Action Research Programme SHARP in Wales It critically examines the experience of SHARP in relation to current literature on policy community health and health inequalities and action research The authors make clear how this regional development has produced opportunities for developing general concepts and theory about community based policy developments that are relevant across national boundaries and show that complex and sustained community action and effective local partnership are fundamental components of the mix of factors required to address health inequalities successfully The book concludes by indicating the connections between SHARP and earlier traditions of community based action and by arguing that we need to be bolder in our approaches to community based health improvement and more flexible in our understanding of the ways in which knowledge and inform developments in health policy The book will be of interest to practitioners and activists working in community based projects students in community development health studies and medical sociology professionals working in health promotion community nursing and allied areas and policy makers working at local regional and national levels
