

20th century responses to Tennyson (context of reception)

- Post WW1 condemned Tennyson for pandering to Victorian public demands that poetry be uplifting, contain a moral and avoid controversial subjects.
- Between the world wars critics spoke of the 'two Tennysons'. The first was condemned for preaching jingoism and offering moral platitudes. The second was valued as a morbid introvert whose achievement lay in his lyrics with their private symbolism developed to express personal anxieties and frustrations.
- Critics since WW2 have been generally more appreciative of the entire canon of Tennyson's poetry.
