McNaugher, 2011-10-01 Americans spend more than 100 billion a year to buy weapons but no one likes the process that brings these weapons into existence The problem McNaugher shows is that the technical needs of engineers and military planners clash sharply with the political demands of Congress McNaugher examines weapons procurement since World War II and shows how repeated efforts to improve weapons acquisition have instead increased the harmful intrusion of political pressures into that technical development and procurement process Today s weapons are more complicated than their predecessors So are the nation s military forces The design of new systems and their integration into the force structure demand more care time and flexibility Yet time and flexibility are precisely what political pressures remove from the acquisitions process In a series of case studies and conceptual discussions McNaugher tackles concerns at the heart of the debate about acquisition the slow and heavily bureaucratic approach to development the preference for ultimate weapons over well organized and trained forces and the counterproductive incentives facing the nation s defense firms He calls for changes that run against the current fashion less centralization or procurement less haste in developing new weapons and greater use of competition as a means of removing the development process from political oversight Above all McNaugher shows how the United States tries to buy research and development on the cheap and how costly this has been The nation can improve its acquisition process he concludes only when it recognizes the need to pay for the full exploration of new technology Critical Issues and Problems Facing the New Administration and Congress United States. Congress. House. Committee on Appropriations. Subcommittee on Dept. of Defense Appropriations,1974 Safety and Reliability: Methodology and Applications Tomasz Nowakowski,Marek Mlynczak,Anna Jodejko-Pietruczuk,Sylvia Werbinska-Wojciechowska,2014-09-01 Within the last fifty years the performance requirements for technical objects and systems were supplemented with customer expectations quality abilities to prevent the loss of the object properties in operation time reliability and maintainability protection against the effects of undesirable events safety and security and the ability to Military Technology, Military Strategy and the Arms Race Marek Thee,2025-03-03 First published in 1986 Military Technology Military Strategy and the Arms Race argues that a principal factor contributing to the arms race is the military research and development R and D sector It traces the arms race since World War II and explores the relationship between the emergence of new weapon technology the development of new weapon systems and their impact on strategic thinking It considers the positions for both the United States and its allies in NATO and for the erstwhile Soviet Union It argues that military R and D which consumes an increasing proportion of total funds spent on R and D has developed a self sustaining technological momentum which is baked by a powerful military industrial bureaucratic technological complex and is increasingly out of control of political leaders The book argues that negotiations to limit the numbers of weapons fail to address the main problem and that more emphasis should be given to considering ways of limiting and controlling military R and D It concludes by proposing a radical shift in policy to achieve this This historical reference work is important for scholars and researchers of military studies defence studies international relations diplomacy and international politics Innovation and the Arms Race Matthew Evangelista,2023-08-15

Innovation and the Arms Race investigates the causes and mechanisms of the technological arms race between the United States and the Soviet Union Challenging the commonly held notion that Soviet weapons innovation processes simply mirror those of the United States Matthew Evangelista shows that the United States usually leads in introducing new military technology while the Soviets typically react to American initiatives Evangelista bases his study of pivotal nuclear weapons development decisions on a variety of US and USSR primary sources including the memoirs of weapons designers and scientists declassified intelligence analyses Soviet Academy of Science documents and Nikita Khrushchev s taped reminiscences He finds that in the United States impetus for innovation comes from the bottom at the initiative of corporate or government researchers and military officials whereas the centralized Soviet system produces innovations from the top in response to foreign developments A revelatory analysis of US military policy Soviet American relations and weaponry development Innovation and the Arms Race bears lessons for the study of great power competition and military innovation today New Conventional Weapons and East-West Security Christoph Bertram,1979-06-17
