

A photograph of a dirt path leading through a forest. The path is light brown and leads towards a bright light at the end of the path. The trees on either side have autumn-colored foliage (yellows and oranges) and some evergreen trees. The text is overlaid on the left side of the path.

I wasn't prepared for death. Nobody is. You lose someone you love more than you love yourself, and you get a crash course in mortality. You lie awake night after night, wondering if you really believe in heaven and hell and finding all kinds of reasons to cling to faith, because you can't bear to believe they aren't out there somewhere, a few whispered words of a prayer away.

The Death Of A Nobody

D. J. Swykert

The Death Of A Nobody:

The Death of a Nobody Jules Romains, 1914 The subject of this modern classic is not a man It is an event says Jules Romains who is considered the French Dos Passos The event starts with the death of Jacques Godard a man of no importance It unfolds through his brief survival in the minds of others the porter of his tenement in Paris his fellow lodgers a few acquaintances his old father who comes up from the country for the funeral a young stranger who feels that the dead pass into a great soul that cannot die The event expresses Romains s belief in collective beings the famous theory of Unanimism In dramatizing his theory Romains developed an advanced motion picture technique when films were in their infancy a technique of group portraits and sudden shifts from scene to scene that keeps this work far ahead of conventional novels Here Romains explores the ideas and the devices used in his twenty seven volume masterpiece Men of Good Will which Andr Maurois calls the boldest attempt to describe completely his own time that any French novelist has made since Balzac

The Death of Home Saladdin Ahmed Bahozde, 2024-04-22 Digital technology has revolutionized connectivity but it has also overcome spatial obstacles that used to shield people from subjugating gazes and unlimited exercise of power The home as an auratic space is dead and this alienation has hindered our democratic capacities and created complex crises The Death of Home aims to intellectually engage readers via enhancing spatial literacy to critically confront today's crises After the Death of a Child Ann K. Finkbeiner, 2012-12-11 For a parent losing a child is the most devastating event that can occur. Most books on the subject focus on grieving and recovery, but as most parents agree, there is no recovery from such a loss. This book examines the continued love parents feel for their child and the many poignant and ingenious ways they devise to preserve the bond. Through detailed profiles of parents, Ann Finkbeiner shows how new activities and changed relationships with their spouse, friends, and other children can all help parents preserve a bond with the lost child. Based on extensive interviews and grief research, Finkbeiner explains how parents have changed five to twenty-five years after the deaths of their children. The first half of the book discusses the short and long-term effects of the child's death on the parent's relationships with the outside world—that is, with their spouses, other children, friends, and relatives. The second half of the book details the effect on the parent's internal world: their continuing sense of guilt, their need to place the death in some larger context, and their inability sometimes to consistently do so; their new set of priorities; the nature of their bond with the lost child; and the subtle and creative ways they have of continuing that bond. Finkbeiner's central point is not so much how parents grieve for their children but how they love them. Refusing to fall back on pop jargon about recovery or to offer easy solutions or standardized timelines, Finkbeiner's is a genuine and moving search to come to terms with loss. Her complex profiles of parents resonate with the honesty and authenticity of uncomfortable emotions expressed and most importantly shared with others experiencing a similar loss. Finally, each profile exemplifies the many heroic ways parents learn to live with their pain and by so doing honor the lives their children should have lived. The Death of the Black Jesus David Barr, 1996
