The Decision Is In Your Hand:

Self-Determination Thomas Pink,2016-12-01 Thomas Pink offers a new approach to the problem of free will Do we have control of how we act so that we are free to act in more than one way and does it matter to morality whether we do Pink argues that what matters to morality is not in fact the freedom to do otherwise but something more primitive a basic capacity or power to determine for ourselves what we do This capacity might or might not take the form of a freedom to act in more than one way and it might or might not be compatible with causal determinism What really matters to morality is that it is we who determine what we do What we do must not simply be a function of powers or capacities for which we are not responsible or a matter of mere chance At the heart of moral responsibility is a distinctive form of power that is quite unlike ordinary causation a power by which we determine outcomes in a way quite differently from the way ordinary causes determine outcomes Pink examines how this power is involved in action and how the nature of action permits the operation of such a power to determine it

Mental Actions Lucy O'Brien,Matthew Soteriou,2009-06-11 The twelve specially written essays in this volume investigate the neglected topic of mental action and show its importance for the metaphysics epistemology and phenomenology of mind The essays investigate what mental actions are how we are aware of them and what is the relationship between mental and physical action

From Morality to the End of Reason Ingmar Persson,2013-09-26 Many philosophers think that if you re morally responsible for a state of affairs you must be a cause of it Ingmar Persson argues that this strand of common sense morality is asymmetrical in that it features the act omission doctrine according to which there are stronger reasons against performing some harmful actions than in favour of performing any beneficial actions He analyses the act omission doctrine as consisting in a theory of negative rights according to which there are rights not to have one s life body and property interfered with and a conception of responsibility as being based on causality This conception of responsibility is also found to be involved in the doctrine of double effect The outcome of Persson s critical examination of these ideas is that reasons of rights are replaced by reasons of beneficence and we are made responsible for what is under the influence of our practical reasons The argument gives rise to a symmetrical consequentialist morality which is more demanding but less authoritative than common sense morality because reasons of beneficence are weaker than reasons of rights It is also argued that there are no non naturalist external practical reasons and all practical reasons are desire dependent so practical reasons cannot be universally binding The question is whether such a morality possesses enough authority to command our compliance This seems necessary in order for us to cope with the greatest moral problems of our time such as aid to developing countries and anthropogenic climate change
