The Decline of Fertility in Germany, 1871-1939 Arthur J. Knodel, 2015-03-08 This is the second in a series of monographs on the historic decline of European fertility to be issued by the Office of Population Research at Princeton University It is a detailed statistical description and analysis of the transition from high to low birth rates which took place in Germany between Unification and the beginning of World War II It assembles an exceptionally comprehensive amount of evidence that will be of great importance to social historians as well as sociologists and demographers John E Knodel relies on modern yet simple methods of measuring the main demographic trends in Germany and uses straightforward methods to test the plausibility of the many hypotheses that have been advanced to explain the great falls in fertility that occurred throughout the western world in the late nineteenth century Originally published in 1974 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905 The Decline of Fertility in Germany, 1871-1939 Arthur J. Knodel, 2015-02-16 This is the second in a series of monographs on the historic decline of European fertility to be issued by the Office of Population Research at Princeton University It is a detailed statistical description and analysis of the transition from high to low birth rates which took place in Germany between Unification and the beginning of World War II It assembles an exceptionally comprehensive amount of evidence that will be of great importance to social historians as well as sociologists and demographers John E Knodel relies on modern yet simple methods of measuring the main demographic trends in Germany and uses straightforward methods to test the plausibility of the many hypotheses that have been advanced to explain the great falls in fertility that occurred throughout the western world in the late nineteenth century Originally published in 1974 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905 The Decline of Belgian Fertility, 1800-1970 Ron J. Lesthaeghe, 2015-03-08 Fertility in Belgium declined early and remained low compared with that in other European countries For this reason and because of the nation's heterogeneity study of its demographic transition illuminates the relationship between fertility behavior and socioeconomic development Professor Lesthaeghe first describes the Belgian experience in a way that permits direct comparison with that of other European nations He then tests the several explanatory hypotheses for the European fertility decline against his data Belgium's heterogeneity in the nineteenth century and in the first half of the twentieth was economic social and cultural Some areas of the country underwent industrialization as early as 1800 1830 while others shifted away from agriculture and artisanal modes of production only between 1880 and 1910 Between 1890 and 1900 regional fertility levels differed drastically as did regional infant mortality rates and life expectancies at birth In addition wide variation occurred in the process of secularization linguistic characteristics demographic trends and other cultural indicators By describing and analyzing these data in relation to Belgium s fertility decline Professor Lesthaeghe makes a major contribution to the theory of the demographic transition that occurred throughout Europe Originally published in 1978 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905

Human Fertility in Russia Since the Nineteenth Century Ansley Johnson Coale, Barbara A. Anderson, Erna Härm, 2015-03-08 The birth rate in late nineteenth century Russia was high and virtually constant but by 1970 it had fallen by about two thirds Although similar reductions have occurred in other countries the decline in Russian fertility is of particular interest because it took place in a setting of great ethnic heterogeneity and under economic and social institutions different from those in the West This book tells the full statistical story of trends in Russian fertility since the first census in 1897 by examining the conditions social economic cultural and demographic that existed at the beginning of and during the decline in human fertility Originally published in 1979 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905
