Politics and Society in the Developing World Peter Calvert, Susan Calvert, 2014-06-03 In a world seemingly surfing a wave of unprecedented affluence it is sobering to be reminded that only thirty out of nearly two hundred countries can really be classified as advanced industrialized countries Eighty per cent of the world's population lives in the developing world This popular concise introduction scrutinises the developing world its varied political institutions and the key social economic and environmental issues at the heart of contemporary debates Wide ranging and clearly written Politics and

Society in the Developing World begins by providing a brisk survey of the major theoretical and methodological interpretations of the social impact of development. It then details the factors which determine the parameters of the developing world before moving on to examine its infrastructure and the crises currently facing it. The book also covers the social and economic contexts of developing societies, the international arena and its impact on the developing world, state building and the tension between dictatorship and democratization. The book focuses on four policy areas: aid, trade, tourism and the environment. Genomics and Health in the Developing World Dhavendra Kumar, 2012-06-14 Readership: Geneticists and clinicians worldwide in addition to graduate students and researchers interested in populations and genomics.

The Nonprofit Sector in the Developing World Helmut K. Anheier, Lester M. Salamon, 1998 Recent years have witnessed a significant upsurge of organized private nonprofit activity in the countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America and with it an appreciation of the role that nonprofit organizations can play in the processes of economic and political change. Long recognized as instruments of relief and promoters of human rights, such organizations have recently come to be viewed also as essential contributors to basic economic growth and to the broader civic infrastructure that is now increasingly seen as a fundamental precondition for markets and representative political institutions to function. Trade and the Developing World in the 21st Century Beverly Carl, 2021-10-01 The developing World contains 80 percent of the globe's population but accounts for less than 25 percent of its trade. The tariffs imposed by rich nations on manufactured products from developing countries are four times higher than the duties on goods from other industrialized nations. This book examines the trade problems the developing nations face in the new Millennium. Professor Carl's detailed analysis of the effects of WTO rules as well as rules of no less than 37 other regional trade agreements on the economic infrastructures of developing nations is as telling and incisive as it is eloquent and insightful. It covers a wide spectrum of essential trade issues including tariffs, quotas, subsidies, dumping, rules of origin, standards, safeguards, textiles, agriculture and information technology. Professor Carl clearly shows why in all of these areas developing nations fail to benefit from multilateral trade agreements as currently constituted. This volume is an invaluable key to understanding the deepest and most serious flaws in the New World Order and an essential resource for practitioners, policymakers, business people and scholars committed to an international trade regime that is truly free. Published under the Transnational Publishers imprint. Rethinking Power

Sector Reform in the Developing World Vivien Foster, Anshul Rana, 2019-12-05 During the 1990s a new paradigm for power sector reform was put forward emphasizing the restructuring of utilities, the creation of regulators, the participation of the private sector and the establishment of competitive power markets. Twenty-five years later only a handful of developing countries have fully implemented these Washington Consensus policies. Across the developing world reforms were adopted rather selectively, resulting in a hybrid model in which elements of market orientation coexist with continued state dominance of the sector. This book aims to revisit and refresh thinking on power sector reform approaches for developing countries. The approach relies heavily on evidence from the past drawing both on broad global trends and deep case material from 15 developing countries. It is also forward looking considering the implications of new social and environmental policy goals as well as the emerging technological disruptions. A nuanced picture emerges. Although regulation has been widely adopted, practice often falls well short of theory and cost recovery remains an elusive goal. The private sector has financed a substantial expansion of generation capacity yet its contribution to power distribution has been much more limited with efficiency levels that can sometimes be matched by well governed public utilities. Restructuring and liberalization have been beneficial in a handful of larger middle income nations but have proved too complex for most countries to implement. Based on these findings, the report points to three major policy implications. First, reform efforts need to be shaped by the political and economic context of the country. The 1990s reform model was most successful in countries that had reached certain minimum conditions of power sector development and offered a supportive political environment. Second, countries found alternative institutional pathways to achieving good power sector outcomes making a case for greater pluralism. Among the top performers, some pursued the full set of market oriented reforms while others retained a more important role for the state. Third, reform efforts should be driven and tailored to desired policy outcomes and less preoccupied with following a predetermined process, particularly since the twenty first century agenda has added decarbonization and universal access to power sector outcomes. The Washington Consensus reforms while supportive of the twenty first century agenda will not be able to deliver on them alone and will require complementary policy measures.

Politics and Society in the Developing World Mehran Kamrava, 2012-10-12 This book is a welcome new edition which completely updates and revises the very popular first edition Politics and Society in the Third World. Mehran Kamrava has brought the book in line with the major changes in global politics and the politics and social issues of the developing world. The book examines key issues such as democratisation, civil society organisations and NGOs, political society, state collapse, democratic bargains and transition, consolidation and problems of legitimacy, elections, multi party politics, industrial development, dependency theory and globalisation, the roles of the IMF and the World Bank, the GATT and other multinational institutions, urbanisation, social change, the increasing influence of western values, capital and institutions, urbanisation, social change, the increasing influence of western values, capital and institutions, political culture, its role and impact in newly democratic developing countries, revolution and gives more examples from Africa, East Asia and rural societies.

Promoting Cardiovascular Health in the Developing World

Institute of Medicine, Board on Global Health, Committee on Preventing the Global Epidemic of Cardiovascular Disease: Meeting the Challenges in Developing Countries, 2010-06-29 Cardiovascular disease CVD once thought to be confined primarily to industrialized nations has emerged as a major health threat in developing countries Cardiovascular disease now accounts for nearly 30 percent of deaths in low and middle income countries each year and is accompanied by significant economic repercussions Yet most governments global health institutions and development agencies have largely overlooked CVD as they have invested in health in developing countries Recognizing the gap between the compelling evidence of the global CVD burden and the investment needed to prevent and control CVD the National Heart Lung and Blood Institute NHLBI turned to the IOM for advice on how to catalyze change In this report the IOM recommends that the NHLBI development agencies nongovernmental organizations and governments work toward two essential goals creating environments that promote heart healthy lifestyle choices and help reduce the risk of chronic diseases and building public health infrastructure and health systems with the capacity to implement programs that will effectively detect and reduce risk and manage CVD To meet these goals the IOM recommends several steps including improving cooperation and collaboration implementing effective and feasible strategies and informing efforts through research and health surveillance Without better efforts to promote cardiovascular health global health as a whole will be undermined
