Developments in the Historical Study of African Religion Terence Osborn Ranger, 1979 Ancient African Religions Robert M. Baum, 2024 Scholars have sometimes maintained that the study of the history of African religions is an impossible endeavor Some have contended that African religions do not have a history unto themselves apart from their interaction with the newer religious traditions of Islam and Christianity Others concede that such a history exists but believe the source materials are insufficient to reconstruct such a history This book speaks directly to these critics The history of African religions becomes in many ways like a pentathlon expecting the scholar who conducts such research to work with written texts to learn African languages to live within a community where these religious traditions are practiced to study material culture both sacred and mundane and a variety of archaeological sources from tree rings to stone circles and gravesites By relying on the existing corpus of written texts oral traditions linguistic analyses descriptions based on participant observation and various types of archaeology Robert M Baum demonstrates that African religious history is nearly as old as humanity itself Baum has spent his entire academic career focused on the historical study of African religious traditions as far back as accessible sources will permit This volume traces the history of African religions beginning with early hominids and their ritual and burial sites through ancient Egypt North and Northeast Africa and Africa south of the Sahara from the Fourth Millennium BCE to the birth of Islam in the Seventh Century A Handbook of Methodologies of African Studies Udobata R. Onunwa, 2010-06-27 Theoretical Explorations in African Religion Wim van Binsbergen, Matthew Schoffeleers, 2013-10-28 First published in 1985 This collection of papers on theoretical and methodological perspectives in the study of African religion is the outcome of a conference which the editors were asked to convene on behalf of the African Studies Centre Leiden in December 1979 The Gods in Retreat Emefie Ikenga Metuh, 2002 A historical study of religion and the causes effects and responses to religious change in Nigeria The contributors analyse growth in religion and offer explanations for the massive drift from traditional religions to Christianity and Islam during the colonial and post colonial periods which resulted in Christian and Muslim groups each constituting over 40% of the entire African population the most rapid growth in Islam and Christianity in any time in the history of Africa They trace how these changes transformed traditional religions noting aspects of continuity and discontinuity within them and assess the impact of the missionaries and conversion urbanisation and Western education on these traditional religions The study also considers the relationship between orthodox Islam dominant in Northern Nigeria and Ahmadiyya Islam It assesses the conflicts between different Muslim groups and

Muslims and Christians within the political context of Nigeria First published in 1985 this is a timely re issue providing the historical background necessary to understanding the current issues in Nigeria today and their political impact
