L. Turner, William C. Clark, Robert W. Kates, John F. Richards, Jessica T. Mathews, William B. Meyer, 1993-01-29 The Earth as Transformed by Human Action is the culmination of a mammoth undertaking involving the examination of the toll our continual strides forward technical and social take on our world The purpose of such a study is to document the changes in the biosphere that have taken place over the last 300 years to contrast global patterns of change to those appearing on a regional level and to explain the major human forces that have driven these changes The first section deals strictly with the major human forces of the past 300 years and the second is a detailed account of the transformations of the global environment wrought by human action The final section examines a range of perspectives and theories that purport to explain human actions with regard to the biosphere Fundamentals of Physical Geography David John Briggs, Peter Smithson, 1986 This primary text designed for undergraduate courses provides a modern approach to the fundamentals of physical geography by linking process form and effect The authors explore the natural world as a series of systems and consider the relationship between the different components of each They examine in turn the atmosphere hydrosphere lithosphere and biosphere providing a thorough discussion of their composition and the ways in which their interaction forms our global environment Throughout the authors demonstrate the role of humanity in influencing the physical environment and the ways in which we are affected by our surroundings Clearly written and lavishly illustrated with maps drawings photographs and charts Fundamentals of Physical Geography is an ideal text Cultural Landscapes and Environmental Change Lesley Head, 2017-09-25 Cultural landscapes are usually understood within physical geography as those transformed by human action As human influence on the earth increases advances in palaeocological reconstruction have also allowed for new interpretations of the evidence for the earliest human impacts on the environment It is essential that such evidence is examined in the context of modern trends in social sciences and humanities This stimulating new book argues that convergence of the two approaches can provide a more holistic understanding of long term physical and human processes Split into two major sections this book attempts to bridge the gap between the sciences and humanities The first section provides an analysis of the methodological tools employed in examining processes of environmental change Empirical research in the fields of palaeocology and Quaternary studies is combined with the latest theoretical views of nature and landscape occurring in cultural geography archaeology and anthropology The author examines the way in which environmental management decisions are made The book then moves on to discuss the relevance of this perspective to contemporary issues through a wide variety of international case studies including World Heritage protection landscape preservation indigenous people and cultural tourism Human Impact on Environment and Sustainable Development in Africa Michael B.K.
