Blouin, William G. Rosenberg, 2011 This lively book explores the changes taking place in history and the archives as a result of new concepts practices and technologies Among other issues it raises the question of what future historical archives will be like if scholars and archivists cannot understand each others work The Archivist and the Historian : Their Records and Responsibilities, 1967 Select Bibliography on the History, Organization, and Activities of Archival Agencies National Archives (U.S.), 1941 A Guide to the Study and Use of Military History John E. Jessup (Jr.), John E. Jessup, Robert W. Coakley, 1979 This Guide to the Study and Use of Military History is designed to foster an appreciation of the value of military history and explain its uses and the resources available for its study It is not a work to be read and lightly tossed aside but one the career soldier should read again or use as a reference at those times during his career when necessity or leisure turns him to the contemplation of the military past Who is the Historian? Nigel A. Raab, 2016-01-01 Who Is the Historian highlights the skill set imparted to those pursuing a historical education and clearly demonstrates the value of the historian in the contemporary world A Guide to the Study and Use of Military History John E. Jessup, 1979 A History of Archival Practice Paul Delsalle, Margaret Procter, 2017-07-31 This revised translation of the classic 1998 Une histoire de l'archivistique provides a wide ranging international survey of developments in archival practices and management from the ancient world to the present day The volume has been substantially updated to incorporate recent scholarship and provide additional examples from the English speaking world These new additions complement the original text and offer a broad and up to date survey with examples spanning Europe Africa Asia and North and South America The bibliography has also been updated with new material and supplementary English language sources making it an accessible and up to date resource for those working and researching in the field of archives and archival history This book is an essential reference volume for both archivists and historians as well as anyone interested in the history of archives

Processing the Past Francis X. Blouin Jr., William G. Rosenberg, 2012-12-18 Processing the Past explores the dramatic changes taking place in historical understanding and archival management and hence the relations between historians and archivists Written by an archivist and a historian it shows how these changes have been brought on by new historical thinking new conceptions of archives changing notions of historical authority modifications in archival practices and new information technologies The book takes an archival turn by situating archives as subjects rather than places of study and examining the increasingly problematic relationships between historical and archival work By showing how nineteenth and early twentieth century historians and archivists in Europe and North America came to occupy the same conceptual and methodological space the book sets the background to these changes In the past authoritative history was based on authoritative archives and mutual understandings of scientific research These connections changed as historians began to ask questions not easily answered by traditional documentation and archivists began to confront an unmanageable increase in the amount of material they processed and the challenges of new electronic technologies The authors contend that historians and archivists have divided into two entirely separate professions with distinct conceptual frameworks training and purposes as well as different understandings of the authorities that govern their work Processing the Past moves toward bridging this divide by speaking in one voice to these very different audiences Blouin and Rosenberg conclude by raising the worrisome question of what future historical archives might be like if historical scholars and archivists no longer understand each other and indeed whether their now different notions of what is archival and historical will ever again be joined
