

Madame's Apartment to her husband

MADAME'S EXPERIMENT TO BRING PETERBINE.

Peterbina, at last, looked upon the specter as a new phase of the brain, and a continuation of the state in which he had been engaged. He read it in this way, without being persuaded that he was really under its control, and, indeed, he had a sense of the danger which he was in. He looked down with great anxiety upon his fingers, looked at his nose, and up to his head, and, opening the curtain, he saw a mass of the well-known objects that appeared on each side of his bed. Every thing seemed to be in motion, and he said to himself, "I have this in the most distinct manner that is in my power." Then he had recourse again to his eyes, which he carefully opened, without any other means than the first action of the brain.

Madame, using all the consequences of action, continued with a wildness of imagination, to say to him that he had seen at length his father, and was now waiting for him to see him.
