The thirteen united States of America

IN CONGRESS. JULY 4th 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America

We the Representatives of the good People of the United States, assembled in Congress do hereby declare, that the United States of America, are, of right, free and independent States...

IN CONGRESS

United States of America

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as shall seem best to them.

And when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them to absolute Tyranny, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.

IN CONGRESS

unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such Principles and organizing its Powers in such Manner, as shall seem to them best for their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that even the most arduous struggle for Liberty may be considered as a just and necessary step towards the attainment of that glorious and ultimate end, for which the civilized World has ever been striving.

We the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, declaring that the United States are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States, absolved from all political connection with Great Britain, and that all political connection between them and that Kingdom, ought to be totally dissolved; and that as a consequence of the foregoing Declaration, all former treaties, alliances, connections and attachments between the United States and that Kingdom, are hereby disavowed and repudiated, and that the United States, as free, sovereign and independent States, shall hereafter have full power to do all those things which other free, sovereign and independent States may do.

In Testimony whereof, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, have hereunto set their hands and seals, at the City of Philadelphia, the fourth day of July, in the second year of the said Declaration of Independence.
